Telco Plans $59.7M Construction Project

KINGSTON — New York Telephone plans a $59.7 million capital construction program for the Mid-Hudson area this year, including completion of a $6 million electronic switching system at Lake Katrine, the utility announced today.

Meanwhile, the state Public Service Commission released its survey showing New York Telephone had an 11 per cent improvement in so-called "weakspot" performance for the third quarter of 1976.

Equipment for the electronic switching system at Lake Katrine is now being installed in a new Neighborhood Road building that went into construction in early 1976, designed to replace two portable switching units now located in trailers in that vicinity.

The first of several ESS offices planned in the Mid-Hudson area over the next five years, the Lake Katrine system will be used primarily to provide electronic Centrex service to IBM.

Besides switching calls with computerized speed, ESS lets a party on the phone know someone else is trying to reach him, forwards calls to another number when the customer is away from home, permits three-way calls, and allows one- or two-digit speed dialing.

The phone company's statewide 1977 capital construction program is expected to exceed $1 billion, with large shares going into growth, plant replacement and customer movement.

In the Mid-Hudson area, covering Ulster and six other counties, New York Telephone serves 197,600 customers with more than 550,000 telephones.

Its "weakspot" performance in 25 major localities covered by the PSC survey in July to September 1976 showed 32 instances below the satisfactory level for the quarter, which was four instances fewer than in the third quarter of 1975.

About two-thirds of the most recently surveyed weakspots were in the repeated reports category, instances where trouble reports on the same or related equipment are repeated within 30 days.

Repeated reports was the only weakspot recorded for the Kingston area, where the percentage of repeated reports for the quarter was 19.2. A 15 per cent level is considered satisfactory.

STEAMY JOB

As cold as the weather may get, this workman at the Andrew De Poala mushroom farm on Rt. 9W has a steamy job to perform. The straw used to mulch mushrooms has to be steamed, and he is guarding it to see that the straw which falls off the conveyor gets back on.

Wants 'Atomic Jinni Bottled'

Carter Asks Nuke Test Ban

WASHINGTON(UPI) — President Carter plans to seek a worldwide reduction of arms sales and will move "quickly and aggressively" to reach agreement with the Soviet Union to ban atomic tests and reduce nuclear stockpiles.

When asked if he really thought it was not too late to "put the atomic jinni back in the bottle," Carter replied, "I don't think it's impossible." He said he was serious in his inaugural pledge to try for reduction and later elimination of nuclear weapons.

Describing the White House as "really awe inspiring," Carter also said he will make his first "fireside chat" to the nation within a week or two on his plans to send a government reorganization plan to Congress shortly, a comprehensive energy policy within 90 days and a welfare reform plan by May 1.

He made the remarks in the first interview of his presidency Sunday in the Oval Office, with reporters of United Press International and Associated Press.

Responding to questions, Carter said he did not contemplate a moratorium on U.S. weapons sales, because that would be "abrupt."

But he said Secretary of State Cyrus Vance will be "much more hesitant in the future to recommend to the Defense Department" arms sales agreements, and the President will have final approval before they are submitted to Congress.

Carter told reporters there was unanimity at his first National Security Council meeting on "the necessity for reducing arms sales or having very tight restraints on future commitments" in order to minimize the efforts by arms manufacturers to initiate sales early.

He also disclosed that Vice President Walter Mondale, who left for a trip to Europe and Japan Sunday, will ask U.S. allies, some of whom are "heavy arms exporters," to join in a multilateral effort to curb sales.

In addition, Carter said Vance will travel to the Middle East within a month and will urge Israel and the Arab states to hold down their arms purchases from the United States and other countries.

As for nuclear arms limitations, Carter said, "I would like to proceed quickly and aggressively with a comprehensive test ban treaty. I am in favor of eliminating the testing of all nuclear devices, instantly and completely."

The President said the Soviets have sent him "an encouraging message" on the subject but he does not know whether they will agree to it.

Carter forecast a "fairly rapid ratification" in two stages of the tentative strategic arms limitation agreement reached by Gerald Ford and Soviet Leader Leonid Brezhnev at Vladivostok in 1974.

He said he would not let controversy over inclusion of the Russian Backfire bomber and the U.S. cruise missile stand in the way of reaching early agreement.

Furthermore, Carter said, "I would like to move very quickly, even prior to the SALT II agreement, toward a much more substantive reduction in atomic weapons as the first step to

Man Held for Questioning

Girl's Frozen Body Found

ELLENVILLE — The frozen, battered body of a former Ellenville woman was found behind the Channelmaster ball field here Sunday afternoon, and Police today are questioning a young man who reportedly lived with her.

Positive identification of the body of Deborah Sue Caruso, discovered by villager Robert Madden as he was walking his dog about 4 p.m., is expected to be made this morning by the young woman's mother, Jeanette Caruso of Swan Lake Mobile Park, Napanoch.

State Police BCI and Ellenville Police are questioning Robert Babcock, with whom the 20-year-old woman had been living at 622 Lincoln Way East, Chambersburg, Pa. He was located at a hotel near here, after the body was discovered, police said.

Ellenville Police Chief George Sheeley, who was one of the first on the scene, and who called in State Police, secured the area where signs of a struggle in the snow were apparent.

Ms. Caruso's handbag lay beside the body.

BCI and Chief Sheeley said that until the body unfreezes and an autopsy is performed, probably today, the cause of death cannot be determined.

The field in which the body was discovered lies between the ball park and the flood control dike, an area frequented by snowmobilers and persons who walk the dike for exercise.

The investigation is under the direction of Capt. Donald J. Pinto of the State Police BCI. Investigator William Woods. Assisting in the investigation are Wallace Hubert and R. A. Gilpin of the state police and Chief Sheeley. A state police identification expert, Ronald Korrem, was also called in.

State Audit of SUNY Camp Inconclusive

Fraud Charge Not Confirmed

NEW PALTZ — State auditors say they can't conclusively prove or disprove charges of fraud in the management of the Ashokan Field Campus of SUNY New Paltz by director Kent Reeves.

After a nine-month audit of the camp's operation, Comptroller Arthur Levitt's office has released a document which states "Although we did not find any evidence of fraud, we cannot state categorically that it did not exist because of the lack of adequate controls over the receipt and disbursement of transactions."

Reeves, who had come under fire last April for mismanagement and conflict of interest in his operation of the 375-acre recreation and education campus, now says he is suing the Faculty Student Association and five of its individual members for $500,000 in character damages.

The audit was conducted at the request of a student active in the FSA which finances two-thirds of the camp's operation.

Reeves maintains that five students and one faculty member conspired against him in making false allegations and that the FSA as a whole acted without foundation in giving credence to the charges.

Among the major recommendations of the report are a need for "more aggressive management" of the camp by FSA and a tightening of the "especially weak" controls over cash receipts and disbursements.

The auditors noted a lack of attendance and usage records, failure of the director to keep receipts on incoming and outgoing funds, lack of adequate control over telephone, gasoline and automobile use for non-business purposes, and failure of FSA and the director to report some income and payments to the Internal Revenue Service.

Despite the negative aspects of the report, Reeves, who earns close to $22,000 a year for his duties, said this morning he was "overjoyed" by the findings which "cleared me with no ifs, ands or buts."

"Any recommendations which were made were aimed at the FSA's administration and not mine," he said. Reeves was briefly suspended from his position last spring by the FSA, which subsequently reversed its decision.

Reeves now says he expects to stay on at the Camp and is in the process of expanding programs there.

The auditors also acknowledged that they had some question as to whether a conflict of interest existed by Reeves acting as a consultant for another camp located in Dover Plains at the same time he worked at Ashokan, but could find no substantial evidence that he had favored the Dover Plains site, which offered him a per capita commission for recommendations. Auditors turned the

World in Brief

Carter Pressing For Gas Sharing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Carter administration is preparing emergency legislation to enable natural gas firms to share supplies with firms running short.

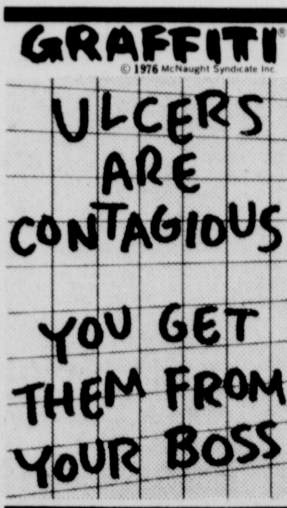

President Carter unveiled plans for the emergency request to Congress as he asked Americans to drop daytime thermostats to 65 degrees to spare natural gas reserves.

While White House energy adviser James Schlesinger said it may be a week or two before Carter submits his emergency measure to Congress, Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., said during the weekend he would introduce legislation to allow 180-day emergency sales of natural gas at unregulated prices.

Gavin Boosted For CIA Director

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Retired Army Lt. Gen. James Gavin, a longtime critic of U.S. involvement in Vietnam, has the backing of two prominent congressmen who want him to become CIA director.

But President Carter said Saturday, "I haven't made any decision at all on General Gavin" as a possible replacement for Theodore Sorensen, the President's original CIA nominee who withdrew last week under pressure.

Mondale Begins Global Mission

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) — Vice President Walter Mondale, who was sworn in last Thursday, left Washington Sunday for the first stop on a globe-circling mission for President Carter.

His mission, to relay Carter's pledge of strong ties with America's traditional allies, began with a breakfast meeting this morning with Prime Minister Leo Tindemans, in Brussels. After that he was to meet with leaders of NATO and the European Community. His 10-day trip also includes stops in Bonn, Rome, London, Paris, Berlin, the Vatican and Tokyo.

Soviets May Seek New Arms Systems

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Unless a new SALT arms control agreement is reached, the Soviet Union could have 7 to 10 new missile systems by 1985, researcher Lewis Allen Frank says in a report prepared for the U.S. Air Force.

Frank's report, published by the American Enterprise Institute Saturday, imagines what a Soviet military planner would say, given only public knowledge of U.S. intentions and capabilities.

Egg Frying Study Get 'Fleece'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Bet you can't guess how long it takes to fry two eggs for breakfast. The federal government spent nearly $46,000 to get the answer. It takes exactly 838 time measurement units, or TMU's if you prefer.

That finding by researchers at the Agriculture Department today won Sen. William Proxmire's "Golden Fleece of the Month" award for January.

The Wisconsin Democrat said the department spent nearly $46,000 to "lay an egg" with its discovery of how long it takes to cook breakfast.

In case you are wondering, a TMU is equal to 0.036 seconds.

"Frankly, I think it would take less time just to fry those two eggs and eat them than to translate all those TMU's into seconds on your handy calculator," Proxmire said.

The senator makes the monthly award for what he considers to be the "biggest or most ironic" example of government waste.

Dromedary Drops to Death

MALIBU, Calif. (UPI) — A one-humped camel plunged over a 160-foot cliff and landed on a winding canyon road startling weekend motorists returning from the beach.

"It was a real surprise for the motorists," a sheriff's spokesman said. "No one really knew what it was. One of our deputies walked up and said, 'Damn, it's a camel.'"

Deputies said the brown dromedary wandered away from the Moon Fire Ranch about dusk Saturday and fell off the cliff onto Topanga Canyon Boulevard about three miles north of Pacific Coast Highway.

Several motorists reported the dead animal to authorities.

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (UPI) — Eight Boy Scout Explorers sponsored by the Riverside Fire Department were among the 14 teen-agers charged last week with starting 150 fires, arson investigators said Sunday.

"It's just the tip of the iceberg in stopping the county's arson problem," a spokesman said. An investigation was expected to be completed later this week with more arrests anticipated.

Two other juveniles arrested had been volunteers with the California Division of Forestry station in the nearby community of Rubidoux.

The youths face arson charges in connection with at least 150 fires during the past two years, including brush fires that consumed hundreds of acres plus several vehicles and structures.

John Peel's Bones Dug Up

LONDON (UPI) — An anti-hunting group has claimed responsibility for digging up the skeleton of Britain's most famous hunter, the legendary John Peel, and said it dumped the bones into a sewage pit.

The skeleton of Peel, who died in 1854 and was immortalized in the song "Do you Ken John Peel," was dug up from its grave in the Lake district village of Caldbeck, Cumbria.

An anti-hunting group telephoned reporters Sunday claiming responsibility for despoiling the grave.

The anonymous caller said the group threw the bones into a nearby sewage pit, knocked down the gravestone and covered it with the mask of a dead fox to protest against foxhunting.

POLICE BEAT

Search Turns Up Cache

KINGSTON — A search of the trunk of a car used by four Newburgh youths Thursday after a shoplifting spree in Port Ewen, Woodstock and Kingston, turned up a considerable cache of stolen property and led to the rearrest of one of the four today.

Ulster County Sheriff deputies arrested Catherine Murphy, 20, of Newburgh, charged her with felony possession of stolen property, arraigned her in justice court and heard her plead innocent. She was committed to Ulster County Jail in lieu of $5,000 bail.

Deputies found 94 cartons of cigarettes, a waffle iron, cosmetics, belts, shoes, umbrellas, records and liquor, as well as other items lifted from Mack Drugs, and Grand Union in Port Ewen and Woodstock.

Ms. Murphy was previously arrested with Terry Davis, 17, Charles Rickett, 23, and an unnamed juvenile last Thursday when they were observed taking cartons of cigarettes out from under their coats in the parking lot of Grand Union in Port Ewen.

All were arraigned at the time on charges of possession of stolen property, paid fines and were released.

Juvenile Aid Director Thomas Johnson said today, that subsequent investigation revealed that Davis, who said he was only 15 at the time of arrest, turned out to be a 17-year-old with a prior arrest record. The search of the car trunk was carried out after a warrant was obtained.

The investigation is continuing.

time Hospital following a one-car crash early Sunday morning in which another passenger, Raymond Reynolds, 27, of St. Remy, was also severely injured. Reynolds is reported in fair condition.

The driver of the car, Brian Blowers, who was not injured, has been arrested by Hurley State Police and charged with driving while intoxicated. He was released in his mother's custody.

The accident occurred on the Creek Locks Road at 3:55 a.m., when Brian Blowers lost control of the car and went off the road on a sharp curve.

The injured were taken to Benedictine Hospital by Don's Ambulance of Rosendale.

Pellet Gun Spree

Hurley State Police arrested six Queens, Long Island youths who were found shooting pellets guns at cars traveling the New York State Thruway in the Kingston area about 8:30 p.m., Sunday.

Charged with second degree reckless endangerment, they were confined to Ulster County Jail in lieu of $200 bail each.

Those arrested include: Juan Oramas, 18, Paul Balsara, 20, David Brosman, 19, Gene Gallo, 20, and Michael and Noel Quigley, both 18, all of Astoria.

Hobbit Burglary

Kingston City Police are investigating a burglary at the Hobbit Bar on Broadway in Kingston.

The incident was reported at 11:19 a.m. Sunday with entrance gained by a side door. Six bottles of liquor, $211 in cash and $15 from a juke box were taken, according to the Detective Division which is investigating.

Possession Charges

City Police arrested Steven Wood, 18, of 51 Linderman Ave., Kingston and Gregory Locke, 16, of Spring Lake Trailer Park, Town of Ulster Saturday and charged them with possession of a controlled substance in the seventh degree. Locke was additionally charged with possession of a controlled substance in the fifth degree.

Youth Injured

A Town of Ulster youth was hit by a car this morning on Neighborhood Road, Lake Katrine, and was taken to the hospital by his parents, according to Town of Ulster Police who said Christopher Ulrich, 12, sustained contusions and bruises of the hand, arm and elbow.

Police said the youth was walking with other students of Lake Katrine School, when he apparently did not see a car operated by Gary O'Leary, of Blue Mountain Road, Saugerties, as it attempted to pass the children while traveling north.

Heights House Fire

Spring Lake Fire Department responded to a call to a house fire in Elmendorf Heights next to the Free Methodist Church on Sheryl Street, this morning.

The fire, believed to have started in a chimney, was confined and firemen remained on the scene this morning.

Four Gunmen Observed

Spanish General Kidnaped

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Four gunmen today kidnaped a senior army general who heads the judiciary system of the armed forces, government officials said.

General Emilio Villaescusa Quilis, 64, was seized as he left his downtown Madrid home to be driven to his office, Spanish news agency reports said.

The kidnapers pulled him into a yellow car and drove off at high speed, the reports said.

There was no immediate official government statement, but government officials confirmed that Villaescusa had been kidnaped.

The kidnaping came six weeks after self-styled left-wing urban guerrillas abducted Spain's No. 4 government official. They are still holding Antonio Maria de Oriol y Urquijo, president of the Council of State, as a hostage for the release of political prisoners.

Villaescusa, 64, is president of the Supreme Council of Military Justice, a kind of supreme court of the armed forces' judiciary. In that position, he has the last word on the release of those political prisoners who were jailed by military tribunals — an estimated half of Spain's remaining 170 political prisoners.

Police began to set up roadblocks on highway leading out of Madrid and stepped up vigilance at airports and railway stations following his abduction.

The kidnaping occurred in O'Donnell St. that runs along the central Retiro Park.

Europa Press said that while there was no firm indication yet as to the motive of the kidnaping, it was believed that Villaescusa was seized by the same organization that is holding Oriol — the "Antifascist Resistance Group Oct. 1," known by the acronym GRAPO.

Police believe GRAPO is a Communist splinter group. But other left-wing organizations have said they have no contacts with GRAPO and, in fact, do not know who its members are. Some Spanish newspapers have speculated the group is backed or manipulated by the extreme right.

In numerous messages to the government and the public, GRAPO has alternately demanded a general political amnesty or the release of 15 convicted terrorist who, the guerrillas said, must be flown to Algiers.

In their latest message last week they accused the government of stalling on the prisoner release and threatened to strike new "heavy blows."

Soviet Economy Had Very Bad Year

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet economy in 1976 grew at one of the slowest rates in years, with some sectors not even matching the modest goals set by planners, authorities have announced.

Figures released by the Central Statistical Board during the weekend showed that some gains in industrial output were the smallest since World War II.

Although no official explanation of the slowdown was reported, Western economists have attributed it to the 1975 harvest disaster and a desire by planners to emphasize quality over quantity.

Growth rate goals were set lower than at any time in the past 25 years, apparently so that factories and enterprises would be spared the frequent end-of-the-year rush to meet the plan with a flood of shoddy goods.

In fact, the board reported, "the technical level and quality of a number of production items are still low."

The statistical board reported that industrial output in 1976 increased 4.8 per cent, 0.5 per cent higher than planned but considerably less than the 7.5 per cent increase in 1975 and 8 per cent a year earlier.

The so-called light industry portion of the economy, which produces consumer goods, achieved a growth rate of 3 per cent, marginally above the 2.7 per cent goal. The target was only half the 6 per cent growth rate set in 1975.

The Soviets reported increased production of automobiles, television sets, washing machines and refrigerators.

Heavy industry increased 5.5 per cent, well above the 4.9 per cent goal. The 1975 planned increase was 7 per cent.

Steel production was 145 million tons — 2 million below the plan. Soviet oil production, which now leads the world, was 520 million tons, an increase of 30 million tons over 1975.

The statistical board said the national income, a figure similar but not equal to the gross national product reported in Western countries, increased 5 per cent instead of the planned 5.4 per cent.

Labor productivity increased 3.3 per cent, off 0.1 per cent of the planned figure. Because of the declining birthrate in developed sections of the country, labor productivity is being increasingly relied upon to achieve economic growth.

County Civil Service Sets Exams

KINGSTON — The Ulster County Civil Service Commission has announced open competitive exams for school business manager and dog warden to be held on March 19.

Last date for filing applications to qualify for either job is Feb. 16.

The eligible list resulting from the business manager exam will be used to fill vacancies as they occur in all Ulster County school districts. The starting salaries vary according to the location of the appointment.

There is now a dog warden position available in the Town of Saugerties. The eligible list resulting from that exam will be used to fill this and other vacancies as they occur. The starting salaries vary.

Candidates for both jobs must have been legal residents of the county for at least four months immediately preceding the date of the written test.

Applications and further details about the positions can be obtained from the Civil Service Commission in the county office building, Kingston.

City ZBA Holds Hearing Tuesday

KINGSTON — The city's Zoning Board of Appeals will conduct a public hearing Tuesday night to consider five requests from Kingston property owners who are seeking either special permits or variances.

Frank and Tana De Cicco are asking for a special permit to do tailoring and selling of bridal garments at their home at 170 Albany Ave. Special permits are granted on a one-year basis and must be renewed annually.

Robert and Fredrick Suppies, owners of a home at 32-34 Hurley Ave., are seeking to renew their variance and convert their two-family dwelling into a four-family dwelling. A variance, which remains with a property once it is granted, must be acted upon within one year of its issuance or it must be renewed.

Charles Lanier Jr. and Martin Pulver, co-owners of a parcel at 587-591 Abeel St., are asking the ZBA to consider their request to erect two chain link fences, each six feet high, across their driveway for protective purposes. The city allows for only four-foot fences without a variance.

The owner of the 84 St. James St. parcel, Norman Risdal, is requesting a variance to continue the nonconforming use of his residence as an owner-occupied first-floor office.

A variance at the former Children's Home, 79-83 East Chester St., is being sought by the Kingston Lions Club. The Lions would like to convert the building into a shared facility with meeting rooms.

All owners, agents, representatives or purchasers must be in attendance at the hearing or the request will be automatically denied.

The hearing gets underway at 7:30 p.m. in the Common Council chamber at City Hall.

Senate Republicans Propose Plan For Cutting Taxes $76 Million

ALBANY (UPI) — Countering Democratic Gov. Hugh Carey's budget proposals, the Republican majority in the Senate has unveiled a score of bills, including four which would reduce taxes by $76 million.

The proposal with the largest impact on state revenues would repeal the sales tax on home heating fuels, saving taxpayers an estimated $61 million.

Legislative sources indicated there would be a push to pass the heating bill and forward it to the Democrat-dominated Assembly while bitterly cold weather still gripped the state.

Senate Finance Committee Chairman John Marchi said the bill, co-sponsored by 34 Republicans, would cut heating costs by 4 per cent and would apply to fuel oil, natural gas, electricity, coal and propane gas used for home heating.

The lost revenue could "be more than offset by legislative reductions in the governor's operating budget," the Staten Island Republican said.

The heating bill was expected to receive a quick and favorable report from the Finance Committee, possibly this week.

The 20-bill "Senate Republican action program," was announced Sunday by Senate Majority Leader Warren Anderson.

One proposal, sponsored by Sen. Lloyd Paterson of Niagara Falls, would cut $10 million in corporate franchise taxes for New York firms.

Anderson sponsored bills to repeal $2 million in unincorporated business taxes on farms and to increase exemptions under the farm estate tax by $1 million.

The Senate Republicans, "not unmindful of the temperature," would attempt to "use the thermometer as a political lever" to induce Assembly Democrats to support the energy proposal, one source predicted.

Republican legislative leaders have also called for an end to temporary bank and business tax surcharges which Carey has insisted must be extended to balance the state's $11.345 billion 1977-78 budget, which he unveiled last week.

Other GOP bills would tighten the freedom of information law, mandate jail sentences for those guilty of using deadly weapons while committing a felony and require public employers to bargain in good faith with employee unions.

Accrual accounting in state fiscal operations, so-called zero based budgeting and a constitutional change to allow limitations on malpractice settlements were the subjects of several other proposals.

'Gambling Epidemic' Besets U.S.

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — The United States is in the midst of a "gambling epidemic," says a University of Colorado sociologist who has spent 10 years studying gambling in America.

"There's no swine flu epidemic, but there's a gambling epidemic and there's more to come," said Tomas Martinez, who has interviewed hundreds of gamblers and watched them wager. "But it could take maybe 10 years until government policy recognizes it."

Martinez said recent studies indicate there are four million to 10 million compulsive gamblers in the United States. He said such compulsive gamblers wager for the same reason alcoholics drink or drug addicts use heroin — to get high.

"Compulsive gamblers usually find that nothing else turns them on like

"Like drugs or stealing are for other people, it's an exciting thing like nothing else in the world. It becomes an addiction."

The sociologist says gamblers often see themselves "as having prestige, performing daring and forceful actions." He said one compulsive gambler, for instance, would imagine himself as an international gambler with international money backing him.

"Since compulsive gamblers are reasonably adept at playing, they could and do play for long periods of time — often until fatigued," said Martinez. "Fatigue combined with overindulgence takes its toll. Betting becomes irrational, and losing results."

Martinez said a person could become a compulsive gambler in about six months but the process often takes longer. He said compulsive gamblers come from all social classes and find forms of gambling suited to their preferences.

"That's the beauty, or danger, of gambling," he said. "If you're a social person you can play cards and face off with people. If you're a loner, you can bet on horses."

Martinez said compulsive gambling, like any addiction, can lead its victims to such consequences as loss of job, jail, family breakup and attempted suicide.

He said the cure rate for chapters of Gamblers Anonymous is only about 10 per cent, and the cure is not necessarily permanent.

Philippine Troops Rescue Hostages

MANILA, the Philippines (UPI) — Government troops today shot and killed a gunman holding a 3-year-old girl and her nursemaid and rescued the hostages unharmed, officials reported.

The officials said government soldiers and sharpshooters riddled the man, identified as Lorenzo (Warren) Balane, with bullets just outside the home of Filipino-Chinese businessman Eduardo Coe, ending a tense 30-hour drama.

Coe's young daughter was rescued unharmed. Balane had freed the girl's nursemaid only minutes earlier.

Observers near the scene in the suburban district of Makati heard gunshots but it was not immediately known if the troops stormed the home or picked off the gunman from a distance.

Balane, a former drum player armed with a .45-caliber automatic pistol, had demanded a ransom of more than a half-million dollars and safe passage to either Libya or Israel in return for the release of his hostages.

He had entered Coe's home early Sunday afternoon, shot and wounded a guest and seized Coe's daughter and four-year-old son. Later, Coe was permitted to carry his son from the home and Balane asked that the nursemaid be allowed to enter to take care of the girl.

Coe shuttled back and forth from the home to authorities headquartered in a school bus, carrying messages and a series of demands from Balane throughout the night.

Early Monday morning, Balane requested and received a long-sleeved silk shirt and blue suede pants. He also asked for newspapers and Harold Robbins' novel, "The Pirate."

Boyhood friends said Balane was a frequent drug user.

Balane told a Manila newspaper reporter that he wanted $20,000 distributed to Manila's poor, $500,000 for himself and a plane to take him to either Libya or Israel.

Balane told the reporter: "I have no quarrel with the government. My action is mine. There is no politics in this and I do not subscribe to violence. All I want is to fly out of the country."

He said he would surrender only to President Ferdinand E. Marcos or his daughter, Imee Marcos.

An Open Letter to the Community

January 22nd marked the anniversary of the tragic, divided decision of the Supreme Court, which, in effect, struck down practically all legal and social barriers to abortion. We call the decision tragic for two reasons, especially. First, because we are dealing here with the direct control over the life and death of innocent people. We feel that a human court has boldly assumed unto itself a power that belongs to God. It is frightening to have a basic right — that to life — swept aside so abruptly. Our second reason for using the word tragic is that this decision has been the major cause of an avalanche of abortion and legal consequences which have committed us to a social course of anti-life.

We feel we have a right to speak out to the community on this vital moral crisis.

We also have an obligation to speak out. Mount Saint Alphonsus is a theological institution which is vitally interested and deeply involved in the religious and moral life of this whole Hudson Valley area. Not to speak, we are convinced, would be a betrayal of what we stand for and work for in this community.

We held before, and still hold, that this decision of the Supreme Court was wrong. We hope and work for its reversal.

We make this statement without bitterness—and we hope it will not be received with bitterness. We also make it with a real sensitivity to the turmoil arising from an unwanted pregnancy. But we make it with the firm conviction that abortion is a wrong solution. This anniversary is a reminder of a decision which attacks moral values that are essential to all human living and the fabric of the world we live in.

High School Tells Snow Day Plans

KINGSTON — In case bad weather forces closing of schools Tuesday or Wednesday, Kingston High School examinations will take place on schedule, with a few exceptions.

Students who come to school for exams will be expected to provide their own transportation on these two days if the rest of the district is closed, Principal Dan H. Allen said.

All KHS exams will take place as scheduled Tuesday, bad weather or not. If bad weather occurs Wednesday, all exams except basic competency reading and math will take place on schedule.

Freeman Readers Write

Dear Editor:

The undersigned were requested by representatives of several Ulster County Towns to prepare and circulate a resolution asking local and state legislators to support existing New York State law granting towns the right to appoint town constables. The resolution was prepared and circulated to all Ulster County town supervisors for action by their town boards.

We were amazed to read in the Jan. 16 Sunday Freeman that the Saugerties Town Board believes our support of existing law may be unlawful. We were equally surprised that elected town officials could refuse to defend their town's right to self-government against encroachment by an appointed state agency.

New York State legislators enacted town law which grants towns the right to appoint town constables as law enforcement officers.

They clarified the authority of constables by designating them as "peace" officers and assigning peace officers virtually all of the powers of "police" officers in making an arrest without a warrant.

Many Ulster County towns are pleased with the quality of law enforcement provided by their constables and have supported them with training opportunities and modern equipment.

Other towns decided in favor of organized police departments under New York State Civil Service Law.

The position taken in our resolution is that elected town officials are the proper persons to decide how the townspeople's money should be budgeted to provide the level of service the people need. Surely all town boards believe they have the right and obligation to make this decision freely, without coercion.

The Saugerties Town Board should reconsider their hasty decision and join with other Ulster County towns in support of existing New York State Law and home rule for our towns.

Join Fight Against Utilities

Dear Editor:

Letter to Ernest J. Gardner, new majority leader of the Ulster County Legislature:

Congratulations and best Mr. Gardner, for your success as chairman of the Ulster County Legislature. We and our neighbors are Republicans, Democrats and Independents, and yet, we are able to agree on the solutions of such problems as the telephone and Central Hudson utilities, taxes, welfare, etc. Most of us have never been active before in speaking out and acting to demand a solution to these problems, but now we must. The pressures on us are too great.

What we are distressed about is the lack of response on the part of our elected officials in Ulster County. Why should Mr. Hinchey be the only elected official who speaks out and joins us in our fight against the utilities?

We sincerely hope that you, sir, will create, by your own leadership, a change in the relationship between our elected officials and the fight of the people for their rights.

We trust that in this coming period we will have a county legislature who will relate to and lead us on all issues facing us and not just sit in the legislative chambers working only on county business — important as that is.

Radiation Our Salvation

Dear Editor:

We need no longer worry over pollution, radiation, war, violence, crime or poverty!

The process of creative mutation, that is, placing nuclear generators in and about critical areas, international weapons testing, and best of all, probable nuclear, thermonuclear, or neutronic war, will provide us with descendants capable of adapting to atmospheric poisons, the plague that will follow and the frigid, unless space our off-orbit planet will inhabit.

They will, if they survive, and of course the unfit will be weeded out, be supermen (women).

In their superior adaptability, possibly surpassing that talent of cockroaches, they might be unrecognizable, even monstrous to us limited general-type anthropoids; but let's not be narrow-minded. Look to the future of the human(?) race, hurrah!

Sick Vet Got Big Response

Dear Editor:

I want to thank you very much for having my letter published in the Daily Freeman and I want to thank all the wonderful people for sending me get well cards and birthday cards. I received a lot of mail and it made me very happy.

I lived in Kingston in 1957 for 11 months. I am a 53-year-old disabled veteran of World War II. I have to go back in the hospital on the 26th of January. I have a liver infection. My doctor said I will be in the hospital two or more weeks. Anyone who would still want to send me a get well card, letter or anything to read while I am in the hospital would be very much appreciated. I will have my friends bring in my mail to me every day while I am in the hospital.

Firemen Did Outstanding Job

Dear Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to commend our city's paid and volunteer firemen for the outstanding job they did on the Beef House fire on Jan. 16.

As myself and my husband reside immediately across the street from the Beef House, we were quite worried about the intense heat and flames on the roof of the restaurant, which were approximately 30 feet from our windows.

The firemen proved incomparable as they battled the blaze under extreme cold and windy conditions, and managed to limit damage in the surrounding buildings to a bare minimum. As we watched the fire from our window for most of the night, we could see the difficulty involved in fighting the fire with the ice covered streets and hoses.

I feel that the residents of Kingston should join me in commending the efforts of the local firefighters during this most dangerous situation, and be proud that they are standing by to serve us.

City Arterial Is Unsound

Dear Editor:

Concerning the letter to the editor by Bradley Wilson of "Out of Work Taxpayers":

No one is trying to keep you unemployed Mr. Wilson, but why do we taxpayers have to shell out hard earned money for a road that no one needs, goes nowhere and will destroy more homes and land than help the local economy.

We cannot continue to tear down buildings just to keep jobs, it is economically unsound. There are, however, so many places in Kingston and the area that could be fixed up—roads, old buildings, and general clean-up of the more shabby parts of Kingston.

We must change by educating ourselves to the future needs, ours and our children of this county, and not sit in resentment of the present and the past.

Flapdoodling The Economy

WASHINGTON — The Carter package called their recommendations for the economy "a package." The New York Times described it as "eclectic and nonideological."

Nonideological is a word supposed to be taken as a compliment inasmuch as it implies one is practical, down-to-earth and free of the blinders of orthodoxy. In this case, though, nonideological may mean confused, uncertain and bereft of the kind of theoretical understandings that help serve as some sort of guide as to what to do.

The last tax rebate may have helped increase the velocity and tempo of business but it had only the most negligible effect on employment. The time is past when lifting the increase in the gross national product to 6 percent or more automatically guarantees full employment. We have a lot of people who are unemployed by reason of age, lack of training, demoralization or whatever else. How large a portion of the total unemployed they represent isn't certain, but it's not small. For many in these categories we really have no programs that we can realistically rely on to get such people on a payroll.

The easiest people among the chronically unemployed to deal with are those whose only deficiency is a lack of training. Whether we can train them to perform tasks for which there may be a real demand is a different question, however. The structures of government and those portions of the private sector that are primarily government contractors have perfected a new species of employee, the person who is highly trained to look busy, efficient, productive and needed, but who in fact has no other function than to stay on the payroll and out of the unemployment statistics.

At the same time our society will continue to live through the anomaly of high unemployment and the impossibility of hiring anyone to do a variety of highly skilled jobs, ranging from clockmaking to cabinetry.

Carter's eclectic, nonideological package also includes a dose of negative income tax in the proposal to give rebates to Social Security pensioners too poor to have paid any taxes. Again, the beneficiaries certainly need the help, but the introduction of the negative income tax without using it as a lever to dismember the social work bureaucracy is unfortunate. After all, one of the main arguments for the negative income tax is that this system of payment should do away with the need for all those damn caseworkers.

All of the above plus the money to be spent on public works programs is supposed to cost in the neighborhood of $15 billion, which may or may not, depending on who is doing the stargazing, contribute to a budget deficit of between 60 and 75 billion. That's just not as awful as it sounds. Contrary to popular fulminations, deficits per se don't cause inflation.

It's how deficits are handled. Do we print money to cover them or do we borrow? If we borrow we don't fuel inflation; if we print, we do.

That's not up to Mr. Carter to decide, but to Arthur Burns, the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. As usual Dr. Burns, a holdover Nixon appointee, isn't saying what he is going to do. In the end this kind of eclectic flapdoodle would be a better word — way of approaching matters may get us by the next year or two, but it is no way to plan an economy and, whether we are ready to admit it to ourselves, we now expect, actually demand that the government do just that. To plan the American economy, new machinery, more coordination, less eclecticism and much less flapdoodle is needed.

James Earl Ray Mystery — IV

The white Mustang cruised the streets of Memphis slowly. James Earl Ray was ready for his "one big lick." The Memphis newspaper stated that Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was staying at the Lorraine Motel with his entourage. The Smiler had to find a room facing King's quarters.

A loser works twice as hard as a winner. Driving past the Lorraine, Ray surely noticed that the backs of sleazy rooming houses on Main Street looked down on King's room. The distance was 225 feet. Staring through a rifle scope, the target would appear to be 32 feet distant.

It is certain that he had help. His car trunk held men's clothing suitable for a short slender man — not Ray's size. The ashtray was deep with dead butts. Ray never smoked. The car carpet on the right front seat was thick with caked mud. Ray was obsessively neat.

On April 1st, 1968, the Smiler had $10.50 in cash. Two days later, he had $1,050 in his pocket. His anonymous boss told him how to get out of town: go a few blocks to the Arkansas-Riverside Drive, turn left, go down Route 55, make a right and drive across the Memphis-Arkansas Bridge and head for Birmingham. Or get on 78 and into the state of Mississippi.

There would be money. Lots of it. An airline ticket was ready for a flight to Canada. From there to London. Then on to Lisbon for a final conference before flying to Rhodesia. The U.S. had no extradition treaty with Rhodesia. It was a place, he had been told, where the blacks "knew their place."

The rooming house on Main was a cheap, no-questions-asked, cash-in-advance place. Bessie Brewer was accustomed to unwashed drunks. She looked up at Ray and saw a brown suit, a figured tie, a clean, smiling face. He wanted a room in the back.

She had a 5-B. There was a 6-B, next to the bathroom, but it was occupied by a man and a woman. Ray paid Mrs. Brewer $8.50 for a week's rent. After that, he spent considerable time in and out of the bathroom. As always, Ray had forgotten something. Binoculars.

It was 3:30 p.m., April 4th. The sun would be down at 6:30. He drove to the York Arms Company, near Beale Street, and bought 7-by-50 glasses. He was impatient to pay the $41.55. When he returned to Main, he found a parking space in front of Mrs. Brewer's rooming house.

In Room 6-B, Charles Stephens and his common-law wife heard the whispered footsteps in and out of the bathroom. Ray locked himself in. He stood in the bathtub, punched a rusty screen out and down into the yard, and raked the porch of the Lorraine with the binoculars. Someone turned the bathroom doorknob, and walked away.

Someone came back. Ray said, "In a minute!" His fingerprints were all over the windowsill, on the wall, and on the tub. He left. He waited. He returned. The second floor porch of the Lorraine was alive with traffic.

At 6 p.m. a limousine stopped below the porch. The blacks began to emerge from Room 306 of the Lorraine. The Rev. Billy Kyles said they had to leave at once for dinner. He waited on an outside stairwell. The Rev. Andrew Young started down the steps. Neighborhood blacks collected around the limousine, looking up. They wanted, just once, to see the round face of the man who fought their fight in peace. The Rev. Jesse Jackson watched Dr. King emerge from his room, patting aftershave lotion. "You remember Ben Branch?" Jackson said.

King stopped at the rail and looked down. "I remember him from Chicago," he said. "He played 'Precious Lord.' " The Rev. Bernard Lee said that Dr. King should wear a topcoat. Across the street, the Smiler put the binoculars down, pulled the heavy rifle up, and stared through the crosshairs.

"Ben," King said, "make sure you play 'Precious Lord, Take My Hand.' Play it real pretty, for me." "Hey guys," Kyles yelled. "Come on." Jesse Jackson looked up at King and said "Oh, Doc..."

There was a sound like two flat boards being slapped together. The bullet, flying three times the speed of sound, caught Dr. King a half-inch below the right side of his lip, shattered his jaw, moved downward and severed his spinal cord. The shot slammed him backwards against the wall.

A white man emerged from Room 308. He was James Laue, sent by the FBI to shadow Dr. King wherever he went. He was too late to do anything.

James Earl Ray was spotted by a roomer, Willy Anchues, as he left the bathroom. "That sounded like a shot," Anchues said. Ray nodded. "Yes," he said. "It was."

Was there a conspiracy to kill Dr. King? You bet there was...

Justice Dept. Sides With Booze Barons

WASHINGTON — Despite the fact that some additives used in alcohol have turned out to be toxic, the booze barons have fought for the right to hide the ingredients from the public.

Now the Justice Dept.'s antitrust chief, Donald G. Baker, has sided with them. He reached his decision after huddling privately last month with six representatives from the alcohol industry. Other federal officials were present, but no consumer advocates were invited.

The issue is whether the Justice Dept. should appeal a ruling by a lower court, which upheld the liquor industry's right to conceal the ingredients its customers drink. The court is located in the heart of Kentucky's bourbon country, and its proximity to the booze business may have affected its view of the law.

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA), which is supposed to protect the public from harmful food, drugs and drinks, would like to compel the liquor lords to reveal their secret recipes. For some brewers have been known to mix dangerous ingredients in their alcohol.

For example, several brewers added cobalt sulfate to their beer a decade ago. This is a metallic substance which forms a big, foamy head. But for some beer drinkers, the appetizing foam turned out to be deadly. At least 50 died from the cobalt-alcoholic mixture.

Afterward, two doctors complained: "Had this metal been known to be present in beer... the prompt administration of (an antidote) might have saved some of our patients."

Under federal law, the FDA can compel producers to list the ingredients in their foods and drinks. But for the sake of bureaucratic peace, the FDA gave up its jurisdiction over the liquor industry years ago. Jurisdiction then was assumed by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, which has been lax about enforcing the labeling laws.

Under pressure from consumer groups, ATF drafted regulations in 1975 that would require liquor labels to list the ingredients. The liquor industry responded with some counter-pressure of its own, sources say, and the ATF quietly withdrew the regulations.

The Food and Drug Administration, however, did not remain quiet. Commissioner Alexander Schmidt contended that consumers ought to know what they are drinking. He informed ATF chief Rex Davis, therefore, that FDA would make the brewers label their ingredients, whether the ATF liked it or not.

This arbitrary FDA action caused the booze barons to start jumping like corks popping out of champagne bottles. Several wine and spirits groups joined in filing a lawsuit. They shopped around for a sympathetic court and chose the federal district court in Owensboro, Ky.

Last August, Judge James Cordon ruled that the ATF, not the FDA, had exclusive jurisdiction over the labeling of alcoholic beverages. This is precisely how the alcohol industry wanted the judge to rule, since the ATF was willing to let the whiskey makers keep their ingredients hidden.

But the FDA's chief counsel, Richard Merrill, fired off a confidential memo to the Justice Dept., requesting that Judge Gordon's decision be appealed. The memo charged that the decision "negates Congress' determination that consumers are entitled to know the composition of the products they consume."

The memo also warned that, if the decision isn't challenged, the FDA will be powerless "to bring misbranding charges" against miscreant liquor companies.

Yet antitrust chief Baker, after meeting with the alcohol representatives, recommended letting Judge Gordon's ruling stand. It's now up to the Solicitor General, who has the final say.

Word of the backstage manipulations reached Rep. Ben Rosenthal, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Consumer Subcommittee, who protested privately to the Justice Dept. He wrote bluntly that "the consumer community believes the ATF has shirked its consumer protection responsibilities" and that "allowing Judge Gordon's ruling to stand will undermine greatly the consumers' faith in... government."

Footnote: A Justice Dept. spokesman said Baker would not comment because his recommendation was before the Solicitor. At press time, the Solicitor's office had made no final decision. An attorney for the liquor companies said the cost of listing ingredients would be prohibitive. The present regulations, he insisted, are adequate to safeguard the drinking public.

GAMBLING GUIDELINES: In New Jersey, state investigators will take a close look at the business groups that have bought up property in Atlantic City, which could become the Monte Carlo of the East Coast.

The investigators suspect that some groups may be fronts for organized crime. The lobbying to legalize gambling in Atlantic City was intensive. More than $1 million was poured into the campaign. State investigators believe much of this money came from mob sources.

Cold Continues As Gas Dwindles

By UPI

Bitter cold drained dangerously low gas supplies in Pennsylvania and Ohio today, prompting a natural gas emergency in Ohio. Cold-weather problems caused by a week-long cold wave plagued much of the east, despite milder temperatures.

A respite from arctic temperatures brought yet another storm across the winter-weary midlands today.

Lingering sub-zero temperatures prompted Ohio Gov. James Rhodes to declare a natural gas emergency to deal with the worst energy crisis in Ohio history. The state legislature was called into special session Tuesday to deal with the growing problem of cold weather and dwindling fuel supplies.

Cold weather also persisted in Pennsylvania, where depleted gas and fuel supplies prompted a state of emergency last week.

Schools remained closed in much of Pennsylvania, Ohio and Tennessee and energy cutbacks idled thousands of workers in Tennessee, Georgia and Mississippi. Power and gas reductions continued from Minnesota to New York despite milder temperatures.

Civil defense officials in Asheville, N.C., distributed water to between 1,200 and 1,400 families whose water pipes froze during last week's cold wave. County officials said many of the families without water also "needed

City Fathers Give In To Changing Life Style

LAWRENCE, Kan. (UPI)—In the college town of Lawrence a couple who wants to set up house no longer needs a marriage license.

The city commission decided to repeal a decades-old ordinance against cohabitation partly because it was unenforceable and partly because the commissioners agreed the statute was widely ignored.

"It's going on all over the city," said assistant city manager Mike Wildren. "It's probably a result of changing life styles."

The ordinance, 20 to 30 years old, was removed from the city code quietly and without fanfare during a code revision completed in early January, Mayor Fred Pence said.

"There didn't seem to be any objections," Pence said of the city council meetings when the revisions were discussed and approved.

"I think the whole concept is that if you have a law on the books, and it's not constitutional, you better get it off there," Pence said. "And if it's unenforceable, you better get rid of it."

Pence, an outspoken man who runs a gardening center, said the law had not been prosecuted because it was vague. Wildren agreed.

"It was nebulous, and it was unenforceable," Wildren said. "We don't have anybody go out and check. We don't have any complaints on it, and in a university town, you'd have to have somebody on every corner."

"I'd have friends I'd have to go out and arrest if we were enforcing it."

Police Deaths Down

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Nearly 20 per cent fewer law enforcement officers were killed in 1976 than the year before, according to the FBI.

"I am hopeful that the intensified examination by the law enforcement profession into the circumstances leading to these killings is producing better equipment and procedures which will further reduce them in the future," FBI Director Clarence Kelley said in a statement Sunday.

The FBI said 109 federal, state and local law enforcement officers were killed last year, 20 fewer than in 1975.

Six died in December compared to 15 in December 1975, it said in a report covering all U.S. and Puerto Rican law enforcement officers.

The FBI said 93 of the 1976 victims were killed by firearms, 65 by handguns. Thirteen victims were killed by their own service weapons, it said.

food or some type of fuel."

The U.S. Agriculture Department's Florida Emergency Board are to meet today to determine whether the recent Florida cold wave was disastrous. A favorable recommendation from the board would allow Florida Gov. Reubin Askew to ask President Carter for an emergency declaration authorizing low-cost loans and special unemployment insurance.

Up to 40 per cent of Florida's citrus crop, 75 per cent of the winter vegetable crop and 95 per cent of the ornamental plants in nurseries were wiped out in last week's five-day freeze.

Moderating temperatures brought snow and sleet to the midlands.

Four inches of snow hit parts of Kansas and Missouri Sunday.

Snow spread over the lower Ohio Valley and freezing rain covered much of the lower Mississippi Valley, the Tennessee Valley and portions of Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana today. Light snow dusted the Great Lakes and spread over the Appalachians.

Travel advisories were posted today for portions of Southern Illinois, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland for up to three inches of snow. Freezing rain prompted travel advisories for parts of Arkansas and Georgia.

The law, as it was listed under "Offenses against morals and decency" in the city code, said, "No man and woman, not married to each other, shall abide or cohabit unlawfully with each other in this city."

Pence said he didn't think the removal of the cohabitation law would have any effect on the townspeople, or the nearly 20,000 students at Kansas University.

"We weren't enforcing it anyway," he said. "I won't say I am really high on that, but I know a lot of things people do are a lot worse."

complete elimination in the future."

"If we can reach an agreement with the Soviet Union for major reductions on atomic weapons, of course the next step would be to get other atomic nations to try to join in this effort, including, of course, France and England and the People's Republic of China," he said.

Carter also said the United States will try to halt the expansion of nuclear arms capability "with every means available to us" in diplomatic channels.

Wearing a blue-gray tweed suit and sipping coffee, the President sat on a sofa before a glowing fire in the fireplace and spoke with some reverence about the White House.

"It is really awe inspiring," he said, calling his tour of the Lincoln suite and the Treaty Room a "very sobering ... very gratifying experience."

"I can't say that I feel completely at ease with it yet," he said, while adding: "I feel good about it. I have enjoyed it so far ... I think I will like it very much. Good working conditions."

Carter said he intends to carry out his campaign commitments, and is "keeping a very close inventory for promises that are made."

He said he feels "quite at ease about the percentage of blacks" hired to top-level positions so far, but he acknowledged being "not completely satisfied with what we have done" in terms of hiring more women for good jobs.

"But we will try to compensate for this as we go along," he said.

Carter called his order pardoning all

Vietnam draft evaders on his first full day in office "a proper thing to do," and said, "It is one that I feel very much at ease with. It is something that should have been done. I was very grateful to be the one to do it."

On other subjects, Carter said:

— Criticism that he will yield too much to Congress is "erroneous." He said he will be "very aggressive and very adamant" in pursuing promises he made in the campaign, but believes in prior consultation with Congress to hold down the clashes where possible.

— He believes his $30 billion, two-year economic stimulus package is "a good one" and a "proper figure" for giving the ailing economy a shot in the arm.

— A peace conference on the Middle East is "very likely this year" and Vance will confer with heads of state in Israel, Egypt, Syria, Saudi Arabia and Jordan in depth on the subject. Many of the leaders will be invited to visit Carter in Washington after Vance visits them.

— If the Palestinians are invited to the conference "as agreed by the other participating nations, along with us, it would probably be as part of one of the Arab delegations. But that is something still to be decided."

— He believes "very strongly" in majority rule in Africa, "which means relinquishing the control of the government by the white minorities in the countries affected."

— U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young will go to the 14-nation African meeting in Tanzania as an observer, not as a negotiator.

— He was "well briefed" during the transition period and while he does not have all the answers as he assumes his presidency, "I haven't been disconcerted or surprised."

matter over to the university's legal department for further investigation.

FSA spokesperson Olga Diez declined comment on the report because FSA has not yet received a "final copy" of the auditors recommendations.

"As soon as we do have that report in our hands, I personally, will be making a statement," she said.

Mrs. Diez said she had received no formal indications that a lawsuit was being brought by Reeves and further denied the director's statement that FSA would be issuing him a formal letter of apology at its Feb. 1 meeting.

"That's Mr. Reeves story," she said. The auditors did recommend that the FSA reimburse the state for work performed by Reeves, not related to his duties as a state employee. The state pays one-third of his salary.

Controls over camp receipts and disbursements were inadequate, the audit report said, and purchases were not offered for competitive bidding. Further, it said, employee records were loosely kept, as were records relating to camp equipment and inventories.

Although the FSA provided more than $90,000 for camp operations for the four year period ending June 30, 1976, no records were kept to indicate the amount of usage by students or staff, the report said, in recommending registration tallies be kept.

Billy and Good Ol' Boys Booze Way Back Home

WASHINGTON (UPI)

Appearing a bit more rundown than when they arrived, Billy Carter and his friends left Washington just as they came — drinking beer.

But Sunday morning the beer was Schlitz on tap in the "Rough Rider Room" bar at National Airport, instead of his favorite Pabst. An airport guard asked him not to drink his own out in the lobby.

"He was nice about it," said Carter as he sat quietly with three or four friends. "He said it was against the law and he might get in trouble if he let me do it."

Carter, his gas station friends and several dozen folks from Plains were awaiting their plane home after four days of Inauguration festivities.

"I'm ready to sleep in my own bed tonight," said one of Carter's friends, perched next to him on a bar stool.

Carter, too, was ready to go home, especially after seeing his hotel bill.

"Billy owns a piece of the hotel," said a friend.

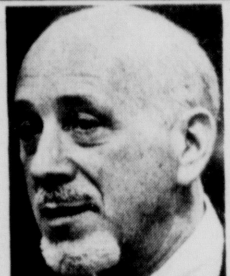

Carter and his friends engaged in an almost constant four-day party, mostly in the privacy of his hotel suite where he could unwind with friends and family away from constant public recognition as the President's brother.

He found time to attend his brother's swearing in ceremony Thursday, visit the White House, and do a little sightseeing Saturday to view the treasures of King Tutankhamun, Carter, who began to tire of the limelight even before he left Plains, was recognized almost immediately everywhere he went. Even his beer-drinking reputation couldn't escape him: on his Saturday sightseeing tour, a man handed him two cold six-packs of Pabst, which he gratefully accepted.

But Sunday morning he went almost unnoticed at the dimly lighted bar as he talked with friends and bought several rounds before takeoff in a chartered Delta jet.

As the time grew near to

As he walked from the bar, he bumped into a black airline worker in coveralls, who stuck out his hand and said, "Well, we did it, didn't we?"

Freeman Readers Write

Dear Editor:

The undersigned were requested by representatives of several Ulster County Towns to prepare and circulate a resolution asking local and state legislators to support existing New York State law granting towns the right to appoint town constables. The resolution was prepared and circulated to all Ulster County town supervisors for action by their town boards.

We were amazed to read in the Jan. 16 Sunday Freeman that the Saugerties Town Board believes our support of existing law may be unlawful. We were equally surprised that elected town officials could refuse to defend their town's right to self-government against encroachment by an appointed state agency.

New York State legislators enacted town law which grants towns the right to appoint town constables as law enforcement officers.

They clarified the authority of constables by designating them as "peace" officers and assigning peace officers virtually all of the powers of "police" officers in making an arrest without a warrant.

Many Ulster County towns are pleased with the quality of law enforcement provided by their constables and have supported them with training opportunities and modern equipment.

Other towns decided in favor of organized police departments under New York State Civil Service Law.

The position taken in our resolution is that elected town officials are the proper persons to decide how the townspeople's money should be budgeted to provide the level of service the people need. Surely all town boards believe they have the right and obligation to make this decision freely, without coercion.

The Saugerties Town Board should reconsider their hasty decision and join with other Ulster County towns in support of existing New York State Law and home rule for our towns.

Join Fight Against Utilities

Dear Editor:

Letter to Ernest J. Gardner, new majority leader of the Ulster County Legislature:

Congratulations and best Mr. Gardner, for your success as chairman of the Ulster County Legislature. We and our neighbors are Republicans, Democrats and Independents, and, yet, we are able to agree on the solutions of such problems as the telephone and Central Hudson utilities, taxes, welfare, etc. Most of us have never been active before in speaking out and acting to demand a solution to these problems, but now we must. The pressures on us are too great.

What we are distressed about is the lack of response on the part of our elected officials in Ulster County. Why should Mr. Hinchey be the only elected official who speaks out and joins us in our fights against the utilities?

We sincerely hope that you, sir, will create, by your own leadership, a change in the relationship between our elected officials and the fight of the people for their rights.

We trust that in this coming period we will have a county legislature who will relate to and lead us on all issues facing us and not just sit in the legislative chambers working only on county business — important as that is.

Radiation Our Salvation

Dear Editor:

We need no longer worry over pollution, radiation, war, violence, crime or poverty!

The process of creative mutation, that is, placing nuclear generators in and about critical areas, international weapons testing, and best of all, probable nuclear, thermonuclear, or neutronic war, will provide us with descendants capable of adapting to atmospheric poisons, the plague that will follow and the frigid, unless space our off-orbit planet will inhabit.

They will, if they survive, and of course the unfit will be weeded out, be supermen (women).

In their superior adaptability, possibly surpassing that talent of cockroaches, they might be unrecognizable, even monstrous to us limited general-type anthropoids; but let's not be narrow-minded. Look to the future of the human(?) race, hurrah!

Firemen Did Outstanding Job

Dear Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to commend our city's paid and volunteer firemen for the outstanding job they did on the Beef House fire on Jan. 16.

As myself and my husband reside immediately across the street from the Beef House, we were quite worried about the intense heat and flames on the roof of the restaurant, which were approximately 30 feet from our windows.

The firemen proved incomparable as they battled the blaze under extreme cold and windy conditions, and managed to limit damage in the surrounding buildings to a bare minimum. As we watched the fire from our window for most of the night, we could see the difficulty involved in fighting the fire with the ice covered streets and hoses.

I feel that the residents of Kingston should join me in commending the efforts of the local fire-fighters during this most dangerous situation, and be proud that they are standing by to serve us.

City Arterial Is Unsound

Dear Editor:

Concerning the letter to the editor by Bradley Wilson of "Out of Work Taxpayers":

No one is trying to keep you unemployed Mr. Wilson, but why do we taxpayers have to shell out hard earned money for a road that no one needs, goes nowhere and will destroy more homes and land than help the local economy.

We cannot continue to tear down buildings just to keep jobs, it is

We must change by educating ourselves to the future needs, ours and our children of this county, and not sit in resentment of the present and the past.

Flapdoodling The Economy

WASHINGTON - The Carter people called their recommendations for the economy "a package." The New York Times described it as "eclectic and nonideological."

Nonideological is a word supposed to be taken as a compliment inasmuch as it implies one is practical, down-to-earth and free of the blinders of orthodoxy. In this case, though, nonideological may mean confused, uncertain and bereft of the kind of theoretical understandings that help serve as some sort of guide as to what to do.

The last tax rebate may have helped increase the velocity and tempo of business but it had only the most negligible effect on employment. The time is past when lifting the increase in the gross national product to 6 percent or more automatically guarantees full employment. We have a lot of people who are unemployable by reason of age, lack of training, demoralization or whatever else. How large a portion of the total unemployed they represent isn't certain, but it's not small. For many in these categories we really have no programs that we can realistically rely on to get such people on a payroll.

The easiest people among the chronically unemployed to deal with are those whose only deficiency is a lack of training. Whether we can train them to perform tasks for which there may be a real demand is a different question, however. The structures of government and those portions of the private sector that are primarily government contractors have perfected a new species of employee, the person who is highly trained to look busy, efficient, productive and needed, but who in fact has no other function than to stay on the payroll and out of the unemployment statistics.

At the same time our society will continue to live through the anomaly of high unemployment and the impossibility of hiring anyone to do a variety of highly skilled jobs, ranging from clockmaking to cabinetry.

Carter's eclectic, nonideological package also includes a dose of negative income tax in the proposal to give rebates to Social Security pensioners too poor to have paid any taxes. Again, the beneficiaries certainly need the help, but the introduction of the negative income tax without using it as a lever to dismember the social work bureaucracy is unfortunate. After all, one of the main arguments for the negative income tax is that this system of payment should do away with the need for all those damn caseworkers.

All of the above plus the money to be spent on public works programs is supposed to cost in the neighborhood of $15 billion, which may or may not, depending on who is doing the stargazing, contribute to a budget deficit of between 60 and 75 billion. That's just not as awful as it sounds. Contrary to popular fulminations, deficits per se don't cause inflation.

It's how deficits are handled. Do we print money to cover them or do we borrow? If we borrow we don't fuel inflation; if we print, we do.

That's not up to Mr. Carter to decide, but to Arthur Burns, the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. As usual Dr. Burns, a holdover Nixon appointee, isn't saying what he is going to do. In the end this kind of eclectic - flapdoodle would be a better word - way of approaching matters may get us by the next year or two, but it is no way to plan an economy and, whether we are ready to admit it to ourselves, we now expect, actually demand that the government do just that. To plan the American economy, new machinery, more coordination, less eclecticism and much less flapdoodle is needed.

James Earl Ray Mystery — IV

The white Mustang cruised the streets of Memphis slowly. James Earl Ray was ready for his "one big lick." The Memphis newspaper stated that Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was staying at the Lorraine Motel with his entourage. The Smiler had to find a room facing King's quarters.

A loser works twice as hard as a winner. Driving past the Lorraine, Ray surely noticed that the backs of sleazy rooming houses on Main Street looked down on King's room. The distance was 225 feet. Staring through a rifle scope, the target would appear to be 32 feet distant.

It is certain that he had help. His car trunk held men's clothing suitable for a short slender man - not Ray's size. The ashtray was deep with dead butts. Ray never smoked. The car carpet on the right front seat was thick with caked mud. Ray was obsessively neat.

On April 1st, 1968, the Smiler had $10.50 in cash. Two days later, he had $1,050 in his pocket. His anonymous boss told him how to get out of town: go a few blocks to the Arkansas-Riverside Drive, turn left, go down Route 55, make a right and drive across the Memphis-Arkansas Bridge and head for Birmingham. Or get on 78 and into the state of Mississippi. There would be money. Lots of it. An airline ticket was ready for a flight to Canada. From there to London. Then on to Lisbon for a final conference before flying to Rhodesia. The U.S. had no extradition treaty with Rhodesia. It was a place, he had been told, where the blacks "knew their place."

The rooming house on Main was a cheap, no-questions-asked, cash-in-advance place. Bessie Brewer was accustomed to unwashed drunks. She looked up at Ray and saw a brown suit, a figured tie, a clean, smiling face. He wanted a room in the back.

She had a 5-B. There was a 6-B, next to the bathroom, but it was occupied by a man and a woman. Ray paid Mrs. Brewer $8.50 for a week's rent. After that, he spent considerable time in and out of the bathroom. As always, Ray had forgotten something. Binoculars.

It was 3:30 p.m., April 4th. The sun would be down at 6:30. He drove to the York Arms Company, near Beale Street, and bought 7-by-50 glasses. He was impatient to pay the $41.55. When he returned to Main, he found a parking space in front of Mrs. Brewer's rooming house.

In Room 6-B, Charles Stephens and his common-law wife heard the whispered footsteps in and out of the bathroom. Ray locked himself in. He stood in the bathtub, punched a rusty screen out and down into the yard, and raked the porch of the Lorraine with the binoculars. Someone turned the bathroom doorknob, and walked away.

Someone came back. Ray said, "In a minute!" His fingerprints were all over the windowsill, on the wall, and on the tub. He left. He waited. He returned. The second floor porch of the Lorraine was alive with traffic.

At 6 p.m. a limousine stopped below the porch. The blacks began to emerge from Room 306 of the Lorraine. The Rev. Billy Kyles said they had to leave at once for dinner. He waited on an outside stairwell. The Rev. Andrew Young started down the steps. Neighborhood blacks collected around the limousine, looking up. They wanted, just once, to see the round face of the man who fought their fight in peace. The Rev. Jesse Jackson watched Dr. King emerge from his room, patting aftershave lotion. "You remember Ben Branch?" Jackson said.

King stopped at the rail and looked down. "I remember him from Chicago," he said. "He played 'Precious Lord.' " The Rev. Bernard Lee said that Dr. King should wear a topcoat. Across the street, the Smiler put the binoculars down, pulled the heavy rifle up, and stared through the crosshairs.

"Ben," King said, "make sure you play 'Precious Lord, Take My Hand.' Play it real pretty, for me." "Hey guys," Kyles yelled. "Come on." Jesse Jackson looked up at King and said "Oh, Doc..."

There was a sound like two flat boards being slapped together. The bullet, flying three times the speed of sound, caught Dr. King a half-inch below the right side of his lip, shattered his jaw, moved downward and severed his spinal cord. The shot slammed him backwards against the wall.

A white man emerged from Room 308. He was James Laue, sent by the FBI to shadow Dr. King wherever he went. He was too late to do anything.

James Earl Ray was spotted by a roomer, Willy Anchues, as he left the bathroom. "That sounded like a shot," Anchues said. Ray nodded. "Yes," he said. "It was."

Was there a conspiracy to kill Dr. King? You bet there was...

Justice Dept. Sides With Booze Barons

WASHINGTON — Despite the fact that some additives used in alcohol have turned out to be toxic, the booze barons have fought for the right to hide the ingredients from the public.

Now the Justice Dept.'s antitrust chief, Donald G. Baker, has sided with them. He reached his decision after huddling privately last month with six representatives from the alcohol industry. Other federal officials were present, but no consumer advocates were invited.

The issue is whether the Justice Dept. should appeal a ruling by a lower court, which upheld the liquor industry's right to conceal the ingredients its customers drink. The court is located in the heart of Kentucky's bourbon country, and its proximity to the booze business may have affected its view of the law.

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA), which is supposed to protect the public from harmful food, drugs and drinks, would like to compel the liquor lords to reveal their secret recipes. For some brewers have been known to mix dangerous ingredients in their alcohol.

For example, several brewers added cobalt sulfate to their beer a decade ago. This is a metallic substance, which forms a big, foamy head. But for some beer drinkers, the appetizing foam turned out to be deadly. At least 50 died from the cobalt-alcoholic mixture.

Afterward, two doctors complained: "Had this metal been known to be present in beer ... the prompt administration of (an antidote) might have saved some of our patients."

Under federal law, the FDA can compel producers to list the ingredients in their foods and drinks. But for the sake of bureaucratic peace, the FDA gave up its jurisdiction over the liquor industry years ago. Jurisdiction then was assumed by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, which has been lax about enforcing the labeling laws.

Under pressure from consumer groups, ATF drafted regulations in 1975 that would require liquor labels to list the ingredients. The liquor industry responded with some counter-pressure of its own, sources say, and the ATF quietly withdrew the regulations.

The Food and Drug Administration, however, did not remain quiet. Commissioner Alexander Schmidt contended that consumers ought to know what they are drinking. He informed ATF chief Rex Davis, therefore, that FDA would make the brewers label their ingredients, whether the ATF liked it or not.

This arbitrary FDA action caused the booze barons to start jumping like corks popping out of champagne bottles. Several wine and spirits groups joined in filing a lawsuit. They shopped around for a sympathetic court and chose the federal district court in Owensboro, Ky.

Last August, Judge James Cordon ruled that the ATF, not the FDA, had exclusive jurisdiction over the labeling of alcoholic beverages. This is precisely how the alcohol industry wanted the judge to rule, since the ATF was willing to let the whiskey makers keep their ingredients hidden.

But the FDA's chief counsel, Richard Merrill, fired off a confidential memo to the Justice Dept., requesting that Judge Gordon's decision be appealed. The memo charged that the decision "negates Congress' determination that consumers are entitled to know the composition of the products they consume."

The memo also warned that, if the decision isn't challenged, the FDA will be powerless "to bring misbranding charges" against miscreant liquor companies.

Yet antitrust chief Baker, after meeting with the alcohol representatives, recommended letting Judge Gordon's ruling stand. It's now up to the Solicitor General, who has the final say.

Word of the backstage manipulations reached Rep. Ben Rosenthal, D.-N.Y., chairman of the House Consumer Subcommittee, who protested privately to the Justice Dept. He wrote bluntly that "the consumer community believes the ATF has shirked its consumer protection responsibilities" and that "allowing Judge Gordon's ruling to stand will undermine greatly the consumers' faith in ... government."

Footnote: A Justice Dept. spokesman said Baker would not comment because his recommendation was before the Solicitor. At press time, the Solicitor's office had made no final decision. An attorney for the liquor companies said the cost of listing ingredients would be prohibitive. The present regulations, he insisted, are adequate to safeguard the drinking public.

GAMBLING GUIDELINES: In New Jersey, state investigators will take a close look at the business groups that have bought up property in Atlantic City, which could become the Monte Carlo of the East Coast.

The investigators suspect that some groups may be fronts for organized crime. The lobbying to legalize gambling in Atlantic City was intensive. More than $1 million was poured into the campaign. State investigators believe much of this money came from mob sources.

Cold Continues As Gas Dwindles

By UPI

Bitter cold drained dangerously low gas supplies in Pennsylvania and Ohio today, prompting a natural gas emergency in Ohio. Cold-weather problems caused by a week-long cold wave plagued much of the east, despite milder temperatures.

A respite from arctic temperatures brought yet another storm across the winter-weary midlands today.

Lingering sub-zero temperatures prompted Ohio Gov. James Rhodes to declare a natural gas emergency to deal with the worst energy crisis in Ohio history. The state legislature was called into special session Tuesday to deal with the growing problem of cold weather and dwindling fuel supplies.

Cold weather also persisted in Pennsylvania, where depleted gas and fuel supplies prompted a state of emergency last week.

Schools remained closed in much of Pennsylvania, Ohio and Tennessee and energy cutbacks idled thousands of workers in Tennessee, Georgia and Mississippi. Power and gas reductions continued from Minnesota to New York despite milder temperatures.

Civil defense officials in Asheville, N.C., distributed water to between 1,200 and 1,400 families whose water pipes froze during last week's cold wave. County officials said many of the families without water also "needed

City Fathers Give In To Changing Life Style

LAWRENCE, Kan. (UPI)—In the college town of Lawrence a couple who wants to set up house no longer needs a marriage license.

The city commission decided to repeal a decades-old ordinance against cohabitation partly because it was unenforceable and partly because the commissioners agreed the statute was widely ignored.

"It's going on all over the city," said assistant city manager Mike Wildren. "It's probably a result of changing life styles."

The ordinance, 20 to 30 years old, was removed from the city code quietly and without fanfare during a code revision completed in early January, Mayor Fred Pence said.

"There didn't seem to be any objections," Pence said of the city council meetings when the revisions were discussed and approved.

"I think the whole concept is that if you have a law on the books, and it's not constitutional, you better get it off there," Pence said. "And if it's unenforceable, you better get rid of it."

Pence, an outspoken man who runs a gardening center, said the law had not been prosecuted because it was vague. Wildren agreed.

"It was nebulous, and it was unenforceable," Wildren said. "We don't have anybody go out and check. We don't have any complaints on it, and in a university town, you'd have to have somebody on every corner."

"I'd have friends I'd have to go out and arrest if we were enforcing it."

Police Deaths Down

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Nearly 20 per cent fewer law enforcement officers were killed in 1976 than the year before, according to the FBI.

"I am hopeful that the intensified examination by the law enforcement profession into the circumstances leading to these killings is producing better equipment and procedures which will further reduce them in the future," FBI Director Clarence Kelley said in a statement Sunday.

The FBI said 109 federal, state and local law enforcement officers were killed last year, 20 fewer than in 1975.

Six died in December compared to 15 in December 1975, it said in a report covering all U.S. and Puerto Rican law enforcement officers.

The FBI said 93 of the 1976 victims were killed by firearms, 65 by handguns. Thirteen victims were killed by their own service weapons, it said.

food or some type of fuel."

The U.S. Agriculture Department's Florida Emergency Board are to meet today to determine whether the recent Florida cold wave was disastrous. A favorable recommendation from the board would allow Florida Gov. Reubin Askew to ask President Carter for an emergency declaration authorizing low-cost loans and special unemployment insurance.

Up to 40 per cent of Florida's citrus crop, 75 per cent of the winter vegetable crop and 95 per cent of the ornamental plants in nurseries were wiped out in last week's five-day freeze.

Moderating temperatures brought snow and sleet to the midlands.

Four inches of snow hit parts of Kansas and Missouri Sunday.

Snow spread over the lower Ohio Valley and freezing rain covered much of the lower Mississippi Valley, the Tennessee Valley and portions of Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana today. Light snow dusted the Great Lakes and spread over the Appalachians.

Travel advisories were posted today for portions of Southern Illinois, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland for up to three inches of snow. Freezing rain prompted travel advisories for parts of Arkansas and Georgia.

The law, as it was listed under "Offenses against morals and decency" in the city code, said, "No man and woman, not married to each other, shall abide or cohabit unlawfully with each other in this city."

Pence said he didn't think the removal of the cohabitation law would have any effect on the townspeople, or the nearly 20,000 students at Kansas University.

"We weren't enforcing it anyway," he said. "I won't say I am really high on that, but I know a lot of things people do are a lot worse."

complete elimination in the future."

"If we can reach an agreement with the Soviet Union for major reductions on atomic weapons, of course the next step would be to get other atomic nations to try to join in this effort, including, of course, France and England, and the People's Republic of China," he said.

Carter also said the United States will try to halt the expansion of nuclear arms capability "with every means available to us" in diplomatic channels.

Wearing a blue-gray tweed suit and sipping coffee, the President sat on a sofa before a glowing fire in the fireplace and spoke with some reverence about the White House.

"It is really awe inspiring," he said, calling his tour of the Lincoln suite and the Treaty Room a "very sobering ... very gratifying experience."

"I can't say that I feel completely at ease with it yet," he said, while adding: "I feel good about it. I have enjoyed it so far ... I think I will like it very much. Good working conditions."

Carter said he intends to carry out his campaign commitments, and is "keeping a very close inventory for promises that are made."

He said he feels "quite at ease about the percentage of blacks" hired to top-level positions so far, but he acknowledged being "not completely satisfied with what we have done" in terms of hiring more women for good jobs.

"But we will try to compensate for this as we go along," he said.

Carter called his order pardoning all

Vietnam draft evaders on his first full day in office "a proper thing to do," and said, "It is one that I feel very much at ease with. It is something that should have been done. I was very grateful to be the one to do it."

On other subjects, Carter said:

— Criticism that he will yield too much to Congress is "erroneous." He said he will be "very aggressive and very adamant" in pursuing promises he made in the campaign, but believes in prior consultation with Congress to hold down the clashes where possible.

— He believes his $30 billion, two-year economic stimulus package is "a good one" and a "proper figure" for giving the ailing economy a shot in the arm.

— A peace conference on the Middle East is "very likely this year" and Vance will confer with heads of state in Israel, Egypt, Syria, Saudi Arabia and Jordan in depth on the subject. Many of the leaders will be invited to visit Carter in Washington after Vance visits them.

— If the Palestinians are invited to the conference "as agreed by the other participating nations, along with us, it would probably be as part of one of the Arab delegations. But that is something still to be decided."

— He believes "very strongly" in majority rule in Africa, "which means relinquishing the control of the government by the white minorities in the countries affected."

— U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young will go to the 14-nation African meeting in Tanzania as an observer, not as a negotiator.

— He was "well briefed" during the transition period and while he does not have all the answers as he assumes his presidency, "I haven't been disconcerted or surprised."

matter over to the university's legal department for further investigation.

FSA spokesperson Olga Diez declined comment on the report because FSA has not yet received a "final copy" of the auditors recommendations.

"As soon as we do have that report in our hands, I personally, will be making a statement," she said.

Mrs. Diez said she had received no formal indications that a lawsuit was being brought by Reeves and further denied the director's statement that FSA would be issuing him a formal letter of apology at its Feb. 1 meeting.

"That's Mr. Reeves' story," she said. The auditors did recommend that the FSA reimburse the state for work performed by Reeves, not related to his duties as a state employee. The state pays one-third of his salary.

Controls over camp receipts and disbursements were inadequate, the audit report said, and purchases were not offered for competitive bidding. Further, it said, employee records were loosely kept, as were records relating to camp equipment and inventories.

Although the FSA provided more than $90,000 for camp operations for the four year period ending June 30, 1976, no records were kept to indicate the amount of usage by students or staff, the report said, in recommending registration tallies be kept.

Billy and Good Ol' Boys Booze Way Back Home

WASHINGTON (UPI)—

Appearing a bit more rundown than when they arrived, Billy Carter and his friends left Washington just as they came — drinking beer.

But Sunday morning the beer was Schlitz on tap in the "Rough Rider Room" bar at National Airport, instead of his favorite Pabst. An airport guard asked him not to drink his own out in the lobby.

"He was nice about it," said Carter as he sat quietly with three or four friends. "He said it was against the law and he might get in trouble if he let me do it."

Carter, his gas station friends and several dozen folks from Plains were awaiting their plane home after four days of Inauguration festivities.

"I'm ready to sleep in my own bed tonight," said one of Carter's friends, perched next to him on a bar stool.

Carter, too, was ready to go home, especially after seeing his hotel bill.

"Billy owns a piece of the hotel," said a friend.

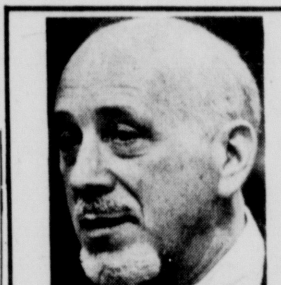

Carter and his friends engaged in an almost constant four-day party, mostly in the privacy of his hotel suite where he could unwind with friends and family away from constant public recognition as the President's brother.

He found time to attend his brother's swearing in ceremony Thursday, visit the White House, and do a little sightseeing Saturday to view the treasures of King Tutankhamun.

Anne Hamilton Fears Life Alone

By MARIAN CHRISTY
PALM BEACH — The interview is running late. One hour late.

Anne Hamilton, George's mother, is unavoidably delayed because she herself is conducting an interview for a prospective butler. The last butler, a double for Cary Grant and oozing charm, got himself invited as a "guest" to certain-level bashes. That made the social situation around town a little sticky. Hence Mrs. Hamilton's own necessary, time-consuming interview is delaying this one.

Now this interview is two hours late. Mrs. Hamilton is having "enormous trouble" parking her Rolls Royce. Parking spaces along "busy-busy" Worth Avenue are less accessible than the big baubles in the windows of Van Cleef & Arpels.

Mrs. Hamilton, a woman of "manners," has sent several messages to chart her progress. The restaurant manager delivering the Hamilton communications shows no signs of acknowledging the absurdity of the situation.

Finally, she arrives. A perfectly groomed brunette grandmother with flashing Spanish eyes, a broad smile, black hair pulled back severely in a face-revealing bun. She is 67, "loves" feather-punctuated gowns and fox-trimmed suits. She claims that as a headstrong teenage Southern belle, she "burned in the fireplace" ballgowns similar to those of competitive peers.

"I can't stand ugliness," says Mrs. Hamilton who freely admits she has had several "nips and tucks" done on her remarkably attractive face. "I like drama in my clothes. When I walk into a room, it's like walking onstage. I like making entrances. I didn't have the talent or drive to be a successful actress. I've never had any wild drives."

Anne Hamilton, nee Stebens, a doctor's daughter born in Kentucky and raised in Arkansas, has been married four times. She is "quite willing" to chance a fifth marriage.

"The libbers are giving all their privileges away," she sniffs. "Men take care of women. Women are ruining things for themselves." Mrs. Hamilton, who lives in an eight-bedroom mansion here, is generally known as Anne Hamilton — except when she wants to make a point.

"My real name," she says with unabashed delight about a string of impressive married names, "is Anne Potter Hamilton Hunt Spalding."

"I had four marriages but I've only been married nine years out of my whole life." She sighs. "And now I know what lonesome is."

The actor, George Hamilton, 37, is her middle son. Bill, 45, the eldest, is a real estate broker. David, 36, is an advertising executive married to the granddaughter of the late opera star, Lauritz Melchior. "I like the good points in all of my sons and don't like the bad points in all of them," she says. "I see their faults clearly."

She is very frank about George.

"He has never quite made it, has he? But, really, I think he's beginning to come back into style. The world-at-large now is bored with hippies. After all, George is beautiful and he's managing to do well."

"George tells me everything," she confides. "My other sons don't tell me much. George discussed the details of his first affair with me and all his affairs since. If he really gets into a problem, he calls me. But he talks fast — as if he is double-parked."

She thinks "it's best" that George and his wife of four years, Alana, are separated.

Anne Hamilton: "I'm not just George's mother."

rated. They have a 2-year-old son, Ashley, in Alana's custody.

"It's the best thing for both of them," she says about a planned divorce. "They always wanted to do opposite things. Alana wants her own career. I can understand that."

The Palm Beach social life is riddled with difficulties if you're what she calls "The Extra Woman."

"When you're a single woman in a small, posh community," she huffs, "the hostesses don't bother with you. They greet with you a sweet hello and that's the extent of the friendship. I'd rather go back to New York. There's more freedom there. Two women can go into a lounge and not be suspect."

Mrs. Hamilton looks at marriage as the "ultimate, complex give-and-take situation" which she says she has not mastered.

"With one of my husbands, I said I'd rub his back if he'd rub mine. Then we got into a terrible argument about whose back would be rubbed last. We simply couldn't agree on the terms."

Insecurities about her singleness run deeply.

"I have this awful dream," she reveals. "I lie on the floor and cry because I've ended up with nobody. The dream must be a symbol of the way I really feel. But I never let it out — except in a dream."

Not long ago, Mrs. Hamilton, a practicing Christian Scientist, had a heart attack. She says a practitioner in California helped to "heal" her. "I've been much, much better since the healing began," she insists. "Other people who have had my problem would have been in an intensive care unit." She believes God doesn't recognize pain which, to quote her, "can be prayed away."

"When George was a boy, a car door was slammed on his finger. He screamed in pain. I calmly prayed over him. He never even lost a fingernail. In fact, in half an hour, he was happily licking an ice cream cone."

The problem Anne Hamilton has frequently coped with is "jealousy" from other women.

"A lot of women loathe me," she says. "They accuse me of walking with my head in the air. I'm near-sighted. Sometimes I don't even see them. Some women ask me if I've ever changed a diaper. I tell them I've done everything."

What she needs now is a man who can manage her life and, specifically, her household.

"People on your staff can be very temperamental," she says. "But you, the lady of the house, must be sweet and lovely and always say darling-this, darling-that. It's all very difficult without a man. I've never married for money. But once I married for security."

Anne Hamilton doesn't want to be known as George's mother. "Everyone knows me," she says. "I've talked to George about this identification problem. George says he's going to write a book and title it 'Everyone Knows My Mother.'"

Special Program

SHANDAKEN—For the final meeting of Phase I of the Bicentennial to be held Tuesday, Jan. 25, 8 p.m. in the Town Hall, the commission is planning a program called "Our Bicentennial in Review."

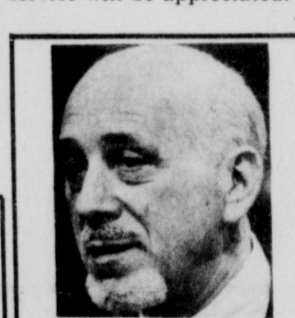

Area residents are invited to loan their best photos for display and slides to be projected and arrangements may be made with Ida Tollenger, Richard Knight or William Caton.

A feature of the evening will be an autograph party. Those attending are asked to bring their Bicentennial Booklets to be autographed by the authors, staff and contributors. Additional books will be available.

The agenda includes a report of the year's activities prepared for the archives of the town board and a presentation by the Woodland Valley Community Association of the names of all who rang the bell for freedom. A progress report will be made on markers for historic sites.

A short business meeting will establish a new commission for Phase II of the Bicentennial activities in 1977. Nominations, suggestions and voluntary offer of service will be appreciated.

Mrs. Jeneanne Biche and Mrs. Grace McCullough fashion "Over the Rainbow" decorations in preparation for the annual Kingston Hospital Auxiliary ball to be held Saturday, Feb. 5, at the Colonade. The decorating committee is in search of a color-wheel spotlight or two to borrow for the evening. "With the energy crisis, no one uses them anymore for Christmas lighting," Grace McCullough explains, "but somebody must have one in the attic or cellar." Reservations for the Auxiliary Ball may be made with Mrs. Wilbur Peters.

Robert Steuding

UCCC Prof Authors Book On Pulitzer Prize-winner

STONE RIDGE—Robert Steuding, an associate professor of English at Ulster County Community College, is the author of a book on Pulitzer Prize-winning poet, Gary Snyder, which has just been published. Entitled "Gary Snyder" the book has been reviewed in the "Library Journal" by Laura M. Zaidman, an English professor at South Georgia College who calls it "well organized" and recommends it to readers.

Professor Zaidman reports that this is the first full-length study of Snyder and explains that the reader "is compelled to get involved in Snyder's visionary poet-ashaman role, and in the magical power and beauty of his language. 'Indeed,' she continues, 'prophetic analogies to Whitman may prove to be valid.'"

Influenced by Beat writers Kerouac and Ginsberg, Snyder blends Zen Buddhism and Oriental and American Indian mythology in his art, according to Professor Zaidman. "Steuding's perceptive portrait of this conscious myth-maker and meticulous craftsman—transcending the image of the hip sub-culture's guru—is recommended," she adds.

In his book, Professor Steuding touches on the development of Snyder's poetic style from the crafted poem he composed in the 1950's to the more visionary poetry he now is composing.

A resident of Olivebridge, Steuding has been a member of the Ulster County Community College faculty since 1969. He formerly taught at the University of Southern California, the Chinese University of Hong Kong, and Michigan State University. Since 1972 he has been an adjunct professor in the Union Graduate School in Antioch College.

He is a poet, lecturer on

Catskill life and love, and hiker and has taken students out to hike the Catskills as part of credit-free courses on "Hiking the Catskills." He earned his Master's Degree from the University of Southern California, has written numerous articles and is doing research on the building of the Ashokan Reservoir for an historical novel. He has written numerous poems concerning the Catskill Mountains.

Stone Ridge Library Membership Drive Is On

STONE RIDGE—The 1977 Stone Ridge Library membership drive is now open and all residents of the Rondout Valley are invited to become members of the library. Through tax deductible contributions, the excellent library services will be able to continue. Membership in the library is not required in order to use the library, but memberships keep the library operating on a full schedule. Contributions may be brought in person to the library or mailed to the Stone Ridge Library, Stone Ridge, 12484. Annual membership is $3 single, or $5 per family.

All library friends are appreciated, and members are welcome to the annual meeting at the library Wednesday, Jan. 26, at 8 p.m.

The library keeps a large selection of best sellers, fiction and non-fiction, mysteries, hobby and garden books, large print books, periodicals, children's books and cassettes on hand at all times. A big favorite with the pre-school youngsters, is the Children's Story and Film Hour held each Wednesday morning from 10 to 11 o'clock in the library.

'Train Fantasy' Set for New Paltz

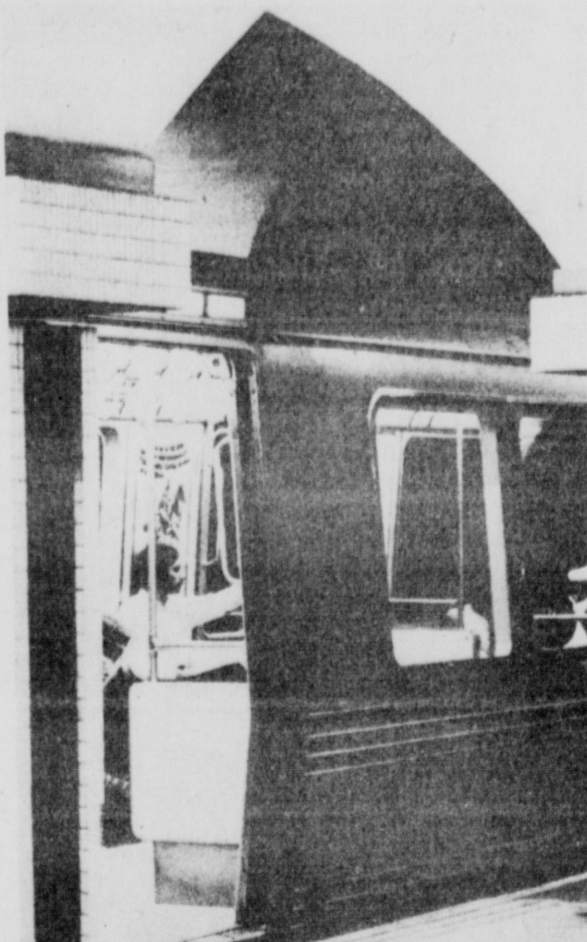

NEW PALTZ—Looking at trains and stations through eyes of an artist Joel Levenson has arranged "Train Fantasy," a photographic collection of views, ("some semi-realism, always recognizable") for exhibition at the new Lindon Gallery, 286 Rt. 32, South, New Paltz.

Levenson, who resides in Ulster Park, is a graduate student at State University College, New Paltz, where he is a candidate for his Masters degree in Fine Arts. In fact, the exhibition is his thesis for the degree. He graduated from New Paltz several years ago with a BS in Science and taught general science in junior high schools in Spring Valley and Yonkers for about five years. His interest was in photography and he always planned to return to school for further study.

At New Paltz he has studied with John Seaholm and Peter Correia. He does some free-lance work and hopes to teach on the university level.

His photographs are one of the first exhibits at the Lindon Gallery and he is assisting Linda and Don Lubov with their gallery project. Linda also does photography and Don paints, draws and does some architectural work. He has taught on the university level.

The "Train Fantasy" exhibition will be at Lindon Gallery Feb. 12 through 27 with opening reception Saturday, Feb. 12, 2 to 4 p.m. The gallery hours are noon to 5 p.m. daily.

Gothic is the arch and mood as subway train to New York enters Hoboken, N.J. station.

Film Presentation This Wednesday

HUDSON—"A Leaf from the Town Record," a new 30-minute film by Hudson area film maker, Jack Ofield and Bowling Green Films, Inc., will be shown at a free public screening at Columbia-Greene Community College, Jan. 26, 7:30 p.m.

Filming took place over a one-year period in the city of Hudson. Using the city's Bicentennial parade as its central motif, the film examines how loyalty is taught and reinforced by community groups and institutions beginning in pre-kindergarten and continuing through high school into adulthood. The process is traced through posters and essays prepared by children for Americanism contests, recitations of patriotic poems and the Pledge of Allegiance and the singing of patriotic songs in schools, churches and clubs. Juxtaposed against the parade footage and views on loyalty are the harsher aspects of unemployment, economic struggle and disenfranchisement. Interviews on these and other subjects feature community leaders and individual residents of Hudson. A portrait emerges of a typical American community in a state of flux.

The film was produced in cooperation with the New York State Council on the Humanities, the Institute on Man and Science, and WMHT-TV and is part of a series created by Jack Ofield.

Following the screening a discussion between audience and a panel will take place. The college is located one mile east of the Rip Van Winkle Bridge, Rt. 23.

DEAR ABBY

Man-to-Man Talk's in Order

DEAR ABBY: As many others have said, I never thought I'd be writing a letter to Dear Abby, but I must confess, I don't know where to turn.

Our 17-year-old son has become interested in a girl. We've always wanted him to have girlfriends, but this one might not be good for him. A week ago Saturday, on their first date, they went to a movie. (We let him use the family car.) He came home at 7:45 Sunday morning!

He said that after the movie, he went to her house to watch television and they both fell asleep. Last Saturday night he went out at 7 p.m. and came home at 4:30 Sunday morning.

Wouldn't you say that something is drastically wrong with a mother who would allow a 15-year-old girl to keep such hours?

Any advice his father and I give him causes nothing but back talk. We've always had a good relationship with our son until now. What do you suggest? WORRIED.

DEAR WORRIED: I suggest that his father have a man-to-man talk with the boy. Of course the girl's parents should place some restrictions on her with regard to the hours she keeps, but since they do not (or she ignores them), it's up to you to put some on your son. Tell him what time you want him home, and if he doesn't comply, the key to the situation is the one that fits the car.

DEAR ABBY: I would like your opinion of the following situation:

When friends just drop in, should the hostess excuse herself and put on a pot of coffee, or get a cold drink and serve it with a sandwich, cake, cookies, or whatever she has on hand? Or should she ask her guests if they would like a hot drink, a cold one or a sandwich?

My husband and I are on opposite sides of this argument and need you to settle it for us. —MILLIE IN MARYLAND.

DEAR MILLIE: The gracious hostess does not inquire. She acts. (P. S. Drop-in visitors should not expect a feed-in.)

DEAR ABBY: For the last 12 years I have gone to the same hairdresser once a week for a shampoo and set. It now costs $6 plus a dollar tip and the cost of parking.

Every Christmas I have given my hairdresser a lovely gift, carefully chosen—something I would like to receive myself.

It just occurred to me, Abby, that inasmuch as I tip my hairdresser every week, SHE (or the owner) should be giving ME a small present at Christmas in appreciation of my business. Next year should I ask, "Which would you prefer, a tip every week or a nice Christmas present?"

I would appreciate your opinion and those of your readers and hairdressers. —TIERED OF GIVING.

DEAR TIERED: Don't ask. Those who perform personal services NEED tips, but feeling as you do, skip the Christmas gift.

ERMA BOMBECK

That Dress May Be Weird But It's Her Xanadu...

Mayva's a real winner. The other night she said, "You know that blue dress you bought a few years ago that was two sizes too small that you were going to diet down to? Well, I saw it the other night on the mother on Happy Days."

"What's that supposed to mean?" I asked.

"It means that dress has been in and out of style five times since you bought it."

"I didn't want to mention it," I said lowering my voice, "but there's something weird about that dress."

"Like what?"
"You'll think I'm crazy."
"Trust me."

"Okay, the truth is that dress is shriveling."

"You're crazy."

"I knew you'd say that. You didn't believe me when I had that fake fur coat that grew in the closet every summer."

"That was different," said Mayva.

"No it wasn't. You saw me hem it every single October. I put it away knee-length, but when I got it out again, it was always back to my ankles."

"I've never heard of a dress shrinking before."

"I didn't say 'shrinking,' I said 'shriveling.' There's a difference. You know how I've been watching my weight. How many pounds would you say I've lost since I bought this dress?"

Mayva thought a moment. "Three hundred and seventy-two."

"Whatever. Well, I get the dress out every year and try it on. I tell you it's getting smaller."

"Can you wear it at all?" asked Mayva.

"Of course I can wear it. From one angle I actually look like Joey Heatherton."

"What angle is that?"
"Flat on my back with my arms outstretched."

"Look! Why don't you just get rid of the dress? You can't wear it and you're not going to. You just have to face up to that."

I jerked it out of her hand. "This dress is my Xanadu, my Miss America, my Pillsbury bake-off, my Academy Award, my Reader's Digest Sweepstakes — don't you understand, Mayva, it's my dream!"

"You know something? Mrs. Walton was wearing that same dress the other night."

Mayva's cruel.

Benefit Concert Planned For the Arts Community

NEW PALTZ—The second annual benefit concert for the Arts Community will be held Friday, Jan. 28, 7:30 p.m., at McKenna Theater on the campus of SUNY, New Paltz.

Since the Arts Community is a non-profit organization, all monies realized from the concert will be used for scholarships and operating expenses. Members of the faculty of the Arts Community are currently in rehearsal for this event, which promises to be a unique evening of music, dance and drama. Last year's concert was very well received and supported by area residents—a success both artistically and financially.

In performance this year will be Dorothy Anderson, Bonnie MacLeod, Deborah Vinton, Polly Wingeyer and Carol Premezzi. At the same time, art works by Arts Community faculty—Natalie Minewski, Jim Krieger and other professional artists—will be exhibited in the lobby of the theater.

Tickets for this much anticipated performance are available at The Handmade Shop, N. Front St., New Paltz, or from students and faculty of the Arts Community.

The Arts Community is presently between sessions. However, several teachers are giving instruction during the inter-session in order to maintain a continuous program. Spring Session begins on Feb. 26; catalogs will be available the end of January. Upon the completion of a successful Fall Session and a very artistic and enjoyable Holiday Festival, the Arts Community is looking forward to the Spring Session with the continuance of many courses for young people as well as the introduction of some new classes and instructors.

A Dream Come True for Watson

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — It's been a long time between victories for Tom Watson, but when he finally snapped his losing streak it was in the tournament he wanted to win more than any other — The Crosby National Pro-Am.

Ever since Watson, now 27, was a student at Stanford University, which is about 80 miles up the freeway on the way to San Francisco, used to sneak his way onto Pebble Beach, there wasn't any tournament he has wanted to win any more than the Crosby.

Sunday, it all came to pass for the likeable native of Kansas City, but he had to survive a few anxious moments over the final three holes to nail down a one-stroke victory over Tony Jacklin, the good-guy Englishman who is determined to make his way once again on the American Tour.

"This is like a dream come true for me," Watson said of his Crosby victory. "I can remember those days at Stanford when they use to let me play here on Saturday mornings before anyone else had teed off.

"I used to get up at 4:30, drive the 80 miles or so down here and hope they would let me play at seven," he said. "After I finished a round, I would hang around until late afternoon, and after everyone else was finished, I'd go around again. You can imagine the special feeling I have for Pebble Beach and the Crosby."

Victory didn't come easy Sunday, though. Watson opened up a two-shot lead on Jacklin but lost one stroke when he bunkered his third shot on the par five, 555-yard 14th and then two-putted from 15 feet. Still, he seemed in good shape, mostly because Jacklin was having trouble making putts of 10 feet on the 16th and 17th and one of five he failed to sink a 10 foot putt, he had enough of a lead to survive. As it was, both Jacklin and Watson bogied the final hole but with the earlier cushion, Watson was able to win the $40,000 top prize by a stroke.

Despite his erratic finish, Jacklin was pleased with his play. Maybe he should be because it's been a long time — four years to be exact — since Jacklin has won a sizeable check in America.

He finished at 274, 13 under par, and won $22,800. Watson's 72-hole score of 273 was a tournament record, and he attributed his fine play to excellent weather.

"I can't remember the weather being any better than it was this last week," said Watson. "I recall coming down here in the summer and playing in the wind and mist. But it's my favorite course and I never miss a chance to play Pebble Beach."

Watson finished fourth at Tucson last week and came here with the idea of having a good time and letting his game take care of itself. He still felt that way after taking a one-stroke lead in the third round.

"I figured if I could shoot 71 I would win the tournament," he said later. "It turned out exactly that way. Even though I had some problems, I never became upset at myself. If I hadn't won I wouldn't feel any different. It's been a great week and a great Crosby, so who can complain."

Arbour Credits His Goaltender

DENVER (UPI) — Coach Al Arbour of the New York Islanders gave goaltender Bill Smith the credit for his team's 7-1 win Sunday night over the Colorado Rockies.

"Smitty kept us in the game the first two periods," said Arbour. "We didn't play well as a team at all, but we capitalized on our chances around the net. We could have been bombed in the first couple of periods if it wasn't for Smith."

Smith turned away 24 Colorado shots in the first two periods and allowed only one score by Colorado's Dennis Croteau with 7:21 gone in the game. Colorado outshot New York 32-29 overall.

New York went ahead 2-0 in the first three minutes on quick goals by Garry Howatt and Andre St. Laurent. The Islanders scored twice in the second period and three times in the final 15 minutes.

Jean Potvin scored 9:54 into the third period, his first goal since mid-November. The other Islander goals were scored by Bert Marshall, Ed Westfall, Bryan Trottier and Denis Potvin.

Arbour said he played four separate lines during the game and at one point made shifts every 45 seconds, afraid that his players would tire quickly because of Denver's mile-high altitude.

He also credited Smith's performance with generating enthusiasm on the Islander bench, which still felt some dejection at their 3-2 loss to Pittsburgh Saturday.

"We were very disappointed after that game," Arbour said. But by the last period, Arbour said the Islanders' spirit was "better than it's been all year."

Colorado coach Johnny Wilson called his team's loss "dreadful" and "embarrassing." Wilson said the club played fairly well "until the end of the second period when we couldn't score. That made a difference. New York bounced the puck around and everybody (on the Rockies) panicked and chased it."

Wilson said Colorado was hurt by the absence of center Paul Gardner, sidelined with a knee injury suffered Friday.

Gardner's 1.17 points per game average is among the best for National Hockey League rookies this season.

Caps 6, Blues 3

The Washington Capitals, doing what they used to do best, spent 55 minutes making the St. Louis Blues overconfident. Then the Caps lowered the boom with four quick goals for a 6-3 victory Sunday.

"It did look like it was a planned attack to put them (St. Louis) to sleep for 55 minutes," said Washington Coach Tom McVie. "But a lot of guys who didn't do anything right all game came alive in the last five minutes."

St. Louis coach Emile Francis said, "That's what you call an explosion. We worked so hard for it and then we lose it."

The visiting Blues held a 3-2 lead with less than four minutes left in the game, when Bill Riley started the fireworks for the Capitals.

Riley has received more attention than most rookies in the National Hockey League because he is black. But his play is beginning to prove noteworthy. After a 10-game trial, the 26-year-old right wing was signed by the Capitals and has accounted for six points in three game since then.

Riley's goal with 3:18 to play tied the game, 3-3.

In the WHA, New England edged Cincinnati 4-3, Birmingham defeated Indianapolis 6-2, Winnipeg outscored Calgary 10-5, Houston beat San Diego 5-3 and Edmonton defeated Phoenix 9-2.

Bruins 3, Flames 0

John Bucyk and Bob Schamutz each scored a goal and an assist and Gerry Cheevers stopped 14 shots in leading Boston to an easy victory over Atlanta.

Canadiens 2, Red Wings 2

Yvan Cournoyer scored a power-play goal at 14:20 of the final period to give Montreal a tie with Detroit after Dennis Polonich had given the Red Wings a 2-1 lead.

Barons 3, Sabres 0

Gary Edwards, acquired Friday from Los Angeles, stopped 27 shots in leading Cleveland past Buffalo. Bob Girard scored the Barons' first goal and Mike Fidler added an insurance score in the second period.

Canucks 6, Rangers 2

Flyers 2, Black Hawks 2

Jim Watson scored the tying goal for Philadelphia after Chicago had taken the lead on goals by John Marks and Kirk Bowman. Reggie Leach scored the Flyers' first goal.

Maple Leafs 5, North Stars 2

Third-period goals by Errol Thompson, Ian Turnbull and Jack Valiquette gave Toronto a victory over Minnesota.

Bubbles Washes Away Nets' Troubles

NEW YORK (UPI)—The New York Nets turned on the "Bubble Machine" Sunday and washed away their troubles.

Led by reserve guard Bubbles Hawkins, the Nets finally snapped their losing streak at 13 games by whipping the Chicago Bulls, 95-86.

Hawkins, who joined the team as a free agent at the start of the losing streak, came off the bench to score 24 points, including 18 in the second quarter, as the Nets sent the Bulls reeling to their 19th loss in 23 road games.

"I was intent on playing a good game today," said Hawkins, who had three assists and three steals to go with his game-high point total. "I felt confident. I knew if I could get time to play I could do well. Everybody was intense. We were intent on winning. It was the first time I had my adrenalin really flowing since I came here."

Hawkins hit on 7-of-7 field goal attempts in the second quarter as the Nets raced from a nine-point first quarter deficit to an 11-point half-time lead. Then, in the last quarter, when the Bulls had drawn to within four points with 3:33 to play, Hawkins put the Nets comfortably in front by hitting a three-point play then stealing the ball and feeding Tim Basset for an easy basket.

Nets' coach Kevin Loughery felt the team's defense against the Bulls' 7-foot-2 center Artis Gilmore also was a decisive factor in the victory. With the Nets double-teaming him throughout the game, Gilmore took only eight shots and scored 15 points.

"Our game plan is always to try and stop certain individuals and today it was to contain Gilmore," said Loughery. "We double-teamed Artis the whole way. We figured if we were gonna get beat, we were gonna get beat with jump shots, not layups. I'm tremendously relieved that the losing streak is over. Our guys have been playing hard right along and we knew we'd get something going soon."

In other games, Philadelphia topped Boston 91-83, Golden State defeated Atlanta 104-97, New Orleans downed the New York Knicks 111-102, San Antonio topped Portland 123-118, Phoenix beat Seattle 98-88, Washington defeated Detroit 119-108, Milwaukee tripped Kansas City 119-111 and Los Angeles routed Indiana 121-104.

76ers 91, Celtics 83

George McGinnis scored nine of his 13 points in the last period to spark Philadelphia to its second victory over the Celtics in 18 hours. Julius Erving led the 76ers with 19 points as the 76ers increased their lead over Boston to seven games in the Atlantic Division.

Warriors 104, Hawks 97

Phil Smith scored nine points in the final six minutes of play to give Golden State a victory over Atlanta. John Drew scored 42 points for the Hawks, but the Warriors offset them with three players scoring better than 20 points. Jamaal Wilkes had 24, Rick Barry 22 and Smith 21 for the Warriors.

Jazz 111, Knicks 102

Pete Maravich scored 38 points, including 11 in the fourth quarter, as New Orleans posted its third victory in a row and handed New York its third straight loss. Bob McAdoo paced the Knicks with 36 points and 19 rebounds.

Spurs 123, Trailblazers 118

George Gervin scored a season-high 41 points and San Antonio held off several Portland rallies to defeat the Trailblazers. Gervin hit on six straight field goals before missing in the first half then came back to hit all eight of his shots in the second half. Bill Walton topped Portland with 28 points.

Suns 98, Sonics 88

Ricky Sobers scored 11 of his 12 points during a five-minute span in the fourth quarter to propel Phoenix to its victory over Seattle. Paul Westphal led the Suns with 24 points, while Alvan Adams added 18 and Curtis Perry 17.

Bullets 119, Pistons 108

Elvin Hayes scored 30 points and Phil Chenier added 23 as Washington beat Detroit for its fifth straight triumph and 11th in 13 games. Hayes scored 12 of his points in the third quarter when the Bullets opened up an 18 point lead.

Bucks 119, Kings 111

Junior Bridgeman scored 27 points and Fred Carter 24 in helping Milwaukee snap a six-game losing streak by defeating Kansas City. The Bucks scored 15 straight points, five of them by Brian Winters, midway through the first quarter to take a 27-8 lead and the closest the Kings could come after that was seven points.

Lakers 121, Pacers 104

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 25 points and rookie Earl Tatum added 20 points, a career high, 20 to lead Los Angeles to its 17th win in the last 21 games and into first place in the Pacific Division with a victory over Indiana.

Borg Had Some Ideas of His Own

BOCA RATON, Fla. (UPI) — Bjorn Borg is a hard young man to convince.

He had just let Jimmy Connors escape three match points, win three straight games and even the sets at one apiece.

Almost everyone of the 5,000 spectators who had paid $15 and $20 to watch the match, figured Connors was well on his way to his eighth straight win over Borg.

But the 20-year-old Swede had his own idea.

"I knew if I could take the third game in the third set, I would beat him. But I had to win that game," he said later.

Borg had the serve and didn't waste any time, winning in four straight points. Both held serve in the next two games, before Borg broke Connors' serve to make it 3-1. Connors broke back immediately, and Borg followed suit. All he had to do from then on was hold his serve.

The final score read 6-4, 5-7, 6-3, as Borg beat Connors for only the second time in his career and collected the $100,000 first prize in the Grand Slam of Tennis Tournament Sunday.

Borg said he had several ideas on how to beat Connors, and most of them worked. He mixed his shots and spreyed more than he usually does and preyed on what he thinks is a Connors weakness — his forehand as he approaches the net.

"When I hit the soft shot to the forehand, when he hits his approach shot he makes errors," Borg said.

"The way to play him is to hit high ones and low ones. If I hit them all with top spin, he likes it," Borg added.

Most of the match's drama came in the 10th game of the second set, with Connors serving and trailing 4-5.

Borg worked the score to 15-40 with a backhand passing shot for double match point.

Connors escaped the first time, when Borg was wide with a backhand. But the score was still 30-40.

This time, Connors charged the net and the shot hit the tape and bounced over. Borg got to the ball, but couldn't get it over the net. Connors stalked away shaking his finger.

Borg got the advantage on the next point, but this time he netted a backhand, giving Connors new life, if only for a while.

Connors played the entire match in his usual aggressive style, moving to the net at every possible opportunity. But Borg chose to stay back along the baseline and use his exceptional ground strokes to make as many returns as possible.

"It's usually hard to come to the net against Jimmy — he has such good depth," Borg said.

Borg said he may have been too eager in his victory over Adriano Panatta in the semifinals of the four-man event Saturday.

"I made too many errors, but I made up my mind Jimmy would make most of the errors today," he said.

Connors won $50,000 for second place and Manuel Orantes collected $30,000 for third place, which he won with his 6-7, 6-2, 6-2 defeat of Panatta in the consolation match.

Two Men to Replace One

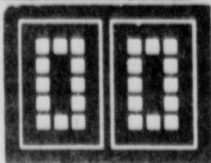

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Dick Syzmanski, the Baltimore Colts' director of pro personnel, and Ernie Accorsi, a former team publicity director, have been picked by owner Robert Irsay to replace fired General Manager Joe Thomas.

Syzmanski, who has been with the club 22 years as a player, assistant coach and executive, is due to be named general manager Tuesday, with Accorsi his administrative assistant.

Accorsi, Syzmanski and former Colt quarterback John Unitas were mentioned as possible successors when Thomas was dismissed Thursday night with a year remaining on his $125,000 a year contract. Thomas, who was seeking a five-year pact at nearly three times the salary, predicted Unitas would get the job.

Syzmanski was drafted out of Notre Dame in 1955 and played center and linebacker before moving into the front office after the Colts lost the Super Bowl to the New York Jets on Jan. 12, 1969. He was named director of pro personnel in 1974, the year he spent a season as the club's offensive line coach.

Accorsi, currently an assistant to National Football Conference President George Halas, directed the Colts' publicity operations before moving to the league office in New York.

Evader Walks Home

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — Anthony Rodriguez walked across the Peace Bridge linking the United States and Canada.

Seven years ago he went the other way and until last week was not sure he could ever return to his homeland. But on Sunday, the 30-year-old Toronto high school teacher became one of the first Vietnamese draft evaders to take advantage of President Carter's pardon.

Rodriguez stepped off the bridge and greeted about 50 well wishers. "It feels so good to be back here," he said, "to be seen again and to be accepted."

"Seven years," mused Rodriguez, a naturalized U.S. citizen born in Cuba. "This is the first time I'm able to step back because I didn't want to come back here a criminal."

"When I first went over," he said, "I used to look back over the border and say, 'I'm a criminal over there.' And now I'm here finally."

He said he hoped to meet his parents from New York City but they were unable to make the rendezvous here.

"My plans are to visit with family and friends and just to see and just to feel being back here," said the University of Buffalo graduate.

He said he would return to Canada and plan his future, but first wanted to have "a nice dinner with some of my friends."

LEGAL NOTICE

Description and map of property which the commissioner of transportation deems necessary to be acquired by appropriation in the name of the people of the state of New York in fee, for purposes connected with the highway system of the state of New York pursuant to Section 30 of the Highway Law.

There is excepted from this appropriation all the right, title and interest, if any, of the United States of America in or to said property. All that piece or parcel of property hereinafter designated as Parcel No. 60 in the Town of Esopus, County of Ulster, State of New York, as shown on the accompanying map and described as follows: Parcel No. 60.

Beginning at a point on the southeasterly bank of existing Rondout Creek, said point being 79.41± feet distant southeasterly measured at right angles, from station 209.90± plus the hereinafter described survey base line for the reconstruction of Kingston-Port Ewen, Station Highway No. 5599, the last mentioned point being N 26°53'38" W. 25.32± feet from a point 80 feet distant southeasterly, measured at right angles, from station 209.46± of said base line; thence through the Rondout Creek the following three courses: N 26°53'38" W. 113.44± feet to a point 76.79± feet distant southeasterly, measured at right angles, from station 211.43± of said base line; thence N 41°17'01" E. 141.21± feet to a point 55.45± feet distant northeasterly, measured at right angles, from station 211.43± of said base line; thence S 20°53'39" E. 94.70± feet to a point of the southeasterly bank of Rondout Creek, the last mentioned point being 53.32± feet distant northeasterly, measured at right angles, from station 210.58± of said base line; thence southeasterly, following the last mentioned line, to Rondout Creek, 150± feet to the point of beginning, being 13.117 square feet or 0.301 acre more or less.

Subject to the rights of others as their interest may appear as set forth in grant dated April 25, 1836 to John P. Smeltzer, recorded in the office of the Clerk of Ulster County, affecting the last mentioned survey, the above map and designated as WATER GRANT RIGHT OF WAY.

The above mentioned survey base line is a portion of the survey base line for the reconstruction of Kingston-Port Ewen, State Highway No. 5599, as shown on a map and plan on file in the office of State Department of Transportation and described as follows:

Beginning at Station 209+50.46; thence N 28°10'57" W. 912.65 feet to station 218+63.11.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, JANUARY 25

Your birthday today: Serves mainly to upset comfortable habits you're falling into, stirs you up for a year-long scramble to get out of your current level of development into another. Projects undertaken now either last for short periods, bridging gaps to greater responsibility, or must be reorganized frequently. Be ready to move on short notice. Relationships are tenuous, not easy to confirm or intensify. Today's natives are unconventional, inventive, intrigued by new ideas.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: People merely mark time; hasty reactions won't help. Allow for delay in appointments, travel. Collect useless clutter, find profitable disposal for it.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Expect a combination of impatience and poor cooperation. Ignore irritations: save wear and tear on your nervous system, insure survival of future goodwill.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Everybody has a different theory about your money, how it should be spent. Look to see what they're doing or did lately with theirs, judge accordingly.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Errors, misunderstandings are the main crop of pilot projects, fliers. A long lane lacks a convenient turn. The problem is staying out of it to begin with.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Wade through petty rivalry of people you aren't too familiar with. Old friends know how to get to you. You're at their mercy momentarily; forgive them, go on.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Affinity for cycles of nature dictates keeping to fundamentals. If tracking down details is dissatisfying, stop to think why. Abstain from criticism.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Youngsters come between people who should be in close harmony. Step out of the picture pro tem. Let all find out what it means to get along without you.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Since today has no overriding force, you're tempted to supply it. Harsh words spoil an old relationship; be sure they're not yours or caused by your actions.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Unrealistic estimates upset judgment, make calculated risks too much so. Never mind other's urging. Whims stay with you long after you tire of them.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Your organizational drive blows everyone's tolerance. Any theory with you at its center is abandoned. Temperament has a field day, many a scapegoat, not just you.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: You're better off if people cancel out while you still have freedom of movement. Take it lightly. They return on discovering what it's like elsewhere.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Use adequate but simple logic to defend your principles against distortive pressures. The more important your function, the tougher the resistance, dissent.

All girls blessed (and that is the right word) with a big bustline get attention in one form or another. It is, as you have found, not all on the basketball court. But all girls, big or little, have to learn to watch out for trouble on dates. You handle that by policing yourself and by seeing that the boy polices himself.

GUESSER FAILS BRIDGE TEST

by Alfred Sheinwold

"If you can guess right when all about you are guessing wrong and blaming it on you," Kipling or somebody once wrote, "then you are a man." It's easy to see that Kipling was not a bridge player.

The principle is useful in many bridge situations. Don't be in a hurry to win a trick at the earliest possible moment. If you wait, your partner may be able to guide you with a discard.

trump and keep your eyes open. East plays the nine of hearts on the second round of trumps, and you no longer have a guess: you know which red ace your partner has.

The principle is useful in many bridge situations. Don't be in a hurry to win a trick at the earliest possible moment. If you wait, your partner may be able to guide you with a discard.

DAILY QUESTION

Dealer, at your right, bids one heart. You hold: ♦KQJ10985 ♥10 ♦A ♠AJ75. What do you say?

ANSWER: Double. You expect to jump to four spades at your next turn. The advantage of doubling first is that your partner may have the king-queen of clubs and an ace, in which case you have a chance of getting to a good slam contract.

A POCKET GUIDE TO BRIDGE written by Alfred Sheinwold is available. Get your copy by sending $1.35 (including postage & handling) to: Sheinwold On Bridge, (name of your newspaper), P.O. Box 854, Port Washington, N.Y. 11050.

Put yourself in the West seat for a test. Your job is to beat five spades. (No fair peeking at the East hand.) You open the singleton club. Declarer wins in dummy and leads a spade to the king. You win with the ace of spades and think to yourself: "Now is the time to show what sort of bridge player I am. I must guess whether my partner has the ace of hearts or the ace of diamonds." You have already shown what sort of bridge player you are, regardless of how you guess at the next lead. A bridge player doesn't guess when there is a way to be sure.

Warn of Soviet Nuclear Blackmail

Senators See Red 'Blitzkreig'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Soviet forces in Central Europe are so strong today they could blitzkrieg West Germany and confront NATO forces in days — not weeks, as the Pentagon believes — with the choice of surrender or nuclear war.

This conclusion emerged from a trip last month by Sens. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and Dewey Bartlett, R-Okla.

Nunn, a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, called a news conference today to discuss the 20page report he and Bartlett have submitted on their trip.

Pentagon contingency planning still is based on the assumption a Soviet attack in Europe would be preceded by a three-week warning period as Soviet troops are transferred to Central Europe from western regions of the U.S.S.R., the report said.

Current strategy calls for NATO defending forces at least to buy time for Western allies to negotiate or decide to commit tactical nuclear weapons.

But the senators warned: "Soviet forces deployed in Eastern Europe now possess the ability to launch a potentially devastating conventional attack in Central Europe with little warning."

"Such an attack might be unattended by the telltale prior callup and transfer to the Central Region (of Europe) of Soviet divisions stationed in western military districts of the U.S.S.R."

Soviet Jetliner Disaster

MOSCOW (UPI) — At least 90 persons died in the crash of a Soviet jetliner near the Central Asian city of Alma-Ata on Jan. 13, according to unofficial reports reaching Moscow during the weekend.

Word of the disaster came from foreigners working in Alma-Ata. There was no mention of a crash in the area's provincial newspapers and officials at the Alma-Ata's airport said they knew nothing about it.

That is not unusual in the Soviet Union, where official confirmation of air crashes is infrequent and details, including the number of victims, are never made public.

Mondale Reaffirms NATO Ties

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) — Vice President Walter Mondale assured America's NATO allies today that cuts in U.S. defense spending would not be felt in Europe. He said U.S. defense spending in Europe might increase.

"President Carter is determined to maintain fully effective defense forces in Europe," Mondale told NATO ambassadors at the start of six-nation, nine-day global diplomatic mission.

"As you are well aware, we are determined to reduce waste and inefficiency in the U.S. defense budget," Mondale said. But he said Carter had asked him to assure NATO "that his new budget and these efficiencies will not result in any decrease in planned investment in NATO defense — and these plans involve some growth."

Mondale said President Carter is "deeply concerned" about the military alliance and is "prepared to consider increased U.S. investment in NATO's defense."

Mondale said the new administration also looked to European allies to join the United States in improving NATO defense "to the limit of individual abilities."

"In a time of detente, it is easy to lose sight of the need for adequate defense. But this need is inescapable."

At the same time, Mondale stressed the need to continue talks with the Warsaw Pact aimed at "fully securing allied interests and leading to a more stable military balance."

Mondale said a top Carter priority would be resumption of the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks and cooperation with American allies in achieving balanced force reductions in Europe.

Mondale said the new administration also plans to consult closely with Western Europe on implementing the final act of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe.

Signatories of the act are scheduled to hold a review conference in Belgrade this summer.

Mondale said Carter envisioned cooperation with European allies in fields other than strict military security. These included, he said, finding solutions to crises in the Middle East, southern Africa and Cyprus; and limiting the proliferation of conventional and nuclear weapons.

Mondale told newsmen after the meeting he had had an "excellent, full-ranging discussion" and would be taking back to Carter "a host of excellent suggestions."

He said he had conveyed Carter's "full commitment" to NATO, considered vital for U.S. as well as European security.

Earlier, Mondale had what he called a "very useful and friendly" meeting with Belgian Prime Minister Leo Tindemans and other top Belgian officials. He said among topics discussed were economic issues such as unemployment and inflation, as well as security matters, EastWest relations and the problems of new and underdeveloped nations.

U.S. Vice President Walter Mondale addresses the foreign press for the first time on his arrival in Brussels.

Despite Popular Win, He Would Have Lost Electoral Margin

Small Vote Shift Would Have Re-elected Ford

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If fewer than 15,000 persons had switched their votes in Ohio and Hawaii, Gerald Ford, not Jimmy Carter, would have been inaugurated last Thursday.

Ford would have joined John Quincy Adams, Rutherford B. Hays and Benjamin Harrison as the only presidents elected without winning the popular vote.

He would have beaten Carter 270-268 in electoral votes while losing the popular vote by 1.7 million.

Armed with these facts and the 1976 election results, backers of a constitutional amendment calling for direct popular elections of presidents are launching a new effort to abolish the Electoral College.

Birch Bayh, D-Ind., the proposal's chief sponsor, said, "I am hopeful that the Congress will act favorably upon the amendment this year."

Sen. Walter D. Huddleston, D-Ky., a cosponsor, said, "The closeness of the last three presidential elections should be warning enough of the dangers."

"Just think about the possibility that we could have inaugurated a man who actually lost the election," Huddleston added.

The amendment would provide for the direct election of presidents and vice presidents. If neither presidential candidate received 40 per cent of the vote, there would be a runoff between the top two finishers.

Bayh, chairman of the Senate constitutional amendments subcommittee, has scheduled hearings beginning Friday in hopes Congress can act this year and the amendment could be in effect for the 1980 elections.

But the amendment — which has never cleared Congress despite numerous attempts — faces difficulties.

It must be passed by two-thirds of the Senate and House and ratified by three-fourths of the states.

In addition, it faces strong opposition from lawmakers who fear that direct elections could rob small states of their power, and hence small states would be totally ignored by presidential candidates during the campaign.

The last attempt to change the system was made in 1970. The House approved the amendment 339-70 but a session-ending filibuster blocked it in the Senate.

Three alternatives are certain to be offered during what could be a protracted Senate battle.

One would eliminate electors but keep electoral votes, eliminating the possibility that a renegade elector could change the outcome of the election.

There are several examples of electors pledged to a candidate voting for someone else. The latest was a Ford delegate who cast his vote for Ronald Reagan.

Another would divide a state's electoral votes. Each state now has two electoral votes plus one for each congressional district. Under the new plan, the statewide winner would get the two votes and the winner in each district would get its vote.

The third is the proportional plan, which would allocate the state's electoral votes in direct proportion to the popular vote in the states.

Riots Called 'Part of Design'

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — President Anwar Sadat says last week's price riots, which he has blamed on Communists, were part of a grand design to weaken Arab unity.

The Egyptian press, stepping up an anti-Soviet campaign, accused Libya and Moscow of organizing an attack on the Egyptian embassy in Tripoli.

In weekend meetings with political and military aides, Sadat said he will deal harshly with "deviators and saboteurs" and ordered a new ban on strikes and demonstrations.

Egypt, he said, will continue to seek an "honorable" settlement with Israel, maintain efforts to rally Arab ranks and will not cut allocations for its armed forces; which he described as the "bulwark of the Arab nation."

Sadat said instigators of the riots wanted the "consequences of these subversive incidents to affect the Arabs' principal cause (the conflict with Israel), undermine Arab solidarity and weaken the Arab stand at the Geneva peace conference."

"These subversive incidents should not be regarded within the purely domestic framework, but as part of the continuous attempts to abort the great victory of October (the 1973 Arab-Israeli war)," he said.

Reporting from Tripoli, the newspapers Al Ahram and Al Akhbar said demonstrators hurled stones, bricks and "incendiary material" against the Egyptian embassy Sunday, and Libyan police ignored the embassy's request for protection.

The newspapers said the attacks were apparently organized, at Moscow's urging, by the Libyan government.

"The madman of Libya (Col. Moammar Khadafy) received his orders from Moscow," Al Akhbar said.

The newspaper also said the official Soviet press "cheered and clapped the acts of subversion and destruction because it wants Egypt to kneel down and return to the sphere of Soviet influence..."

Egyptian-Libyan relations soured in 1973 when Sadat rejected a bid by Khadafy for a merger of the two countries. Relations with Moscow were strained around the same time over the Kremlin's refusal to provide Egypt with new weapons and reschedule its debts.

Cigarette Smoking Shows

WASHINGTON (UPI) — World-wide cigarette use — despite anti-smoking campaigns — continues to rise, the Agriculture Department says, and new tobacco markets are eroding the U.S. spot as the crop's chief exporter.

Department specialist B.G. Andrews said cigarette consumption is likely to continue rising at a 3 to 4 per cent annual rate in the near future even with the warnings about health dangers.

Andrews said world cigarette sales are rising partly because population growth offsets the number of people who quit smoking. But also, he said, the increase comes from rising incomes, particularly in developing nations.

Tobacco consumption has traditionally been held down by poverty in those countries, and cigarettes are among the first "luxury" items bought when incomes rise, he said.

But, Andrews said in a recent interview, while the continuing trend upward steadily expands the tobacco market, the U.S. position as the world's top exporter is being cut by other nations pricing their crop far below the U.S. level.

Andrews, a commodity analyst in the department's Foreign Agricultural Service, said that while the United States is still the leading exporter — sales of $1.4 billion in the year ending last June 30 — its share of the world market declined from 27.7 per cent in the late 1960's to 20.8 per cent in 1975.

International Increase

"In recent years, competition has been rising as developing nations like Brazil and Mexico (in addition to South Korea and India) have entered the picture and capitalized on their relatively low production costs," Andrews said.

With the aid of government protection and special low tariff rates set for developing countries in the European Common Market, both Brazil and Mexico can sell flue-cured and burley tobaccos on the world market at about half the American export price, Andrews said.

New Systems Slated for Mid-Hudson Area

Telco Plans $59.7M Construction Project

KINGSTON — New York Telephone plans a $59.7 million capital construction program for the Mid-Hudson area this year, including completion of a $6 million electronic switching system at Lake Katrine, the utility announced today.

Meanwhile, the state Public Service Commission released its survey showing New York Telephone had an 11 per cent improvement in so-called "weakspot" performance for the third quarter of 1976.

Equipment for the electronic switching system at Lake Katrine is now being installed in a new Neighborhood Road building that went into construction in early 1976, designed to replace two portable switching units now located in trailers in that vicinity.

The first of several ESS offices

planned in the Mid-Hudson area over the next five years, the Lake Katrine system will be used primarily to provide electronic Centrex service to IBM.

Besides switching calls with computerized speed, ESS lets a party on the phone know someone else is trying to reach him, forwards calls to another number when the customer is away from home, permits three-way calls, and allows one- or two-digit speed dialing.

The phone company's statewide 1977 capital construction program is expected to exceed $1 billion, with large shares going into growth, plant replacement and customer movement.

In the Mid-Hudson area, covering Ulster and six other counties, New York Telephone serves 197,600 customers with more than 550,000 telephones.

Its "weakspot" performance in 25 major localities covered by the PSC survey in July to September 1976 showed 32 instances below the satisfactory level for the quarter, which was four instances fewer than in the third quarter of 1975.

About two-thirds of the most recently surveyed weakspots were in the repeated reports category, instances where trouble reports on the same or related equipment are repeated within 30 days.

Repeated reports was the only weakspot recorded for the Kingston area, where the percentage of repeated reports for the quarter was 19.2. A 15 per cent level is considered satisfactory.

Wants 'Atomic Jinni Bottled'

Carter Asks Nuke Test Ban

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter plans to seek a worldwide reduction of arms sales and will move "quickly and aggressively" to reach agreement with the Soviet Union to ban atomic tests and reduce nuclear stockpiles.

When asked if he really thought it was not too late to "put the atomic jinni back in the bottle," Carter replied, "I don't think it's impossible." He said he was serious in his inaugural pledge to try for reduction and later elimination of nuclear weapons.

Describing the White House as "really awe inspiring," Carter also said he will make his first "fireside chat" to the nation within a week or two on his plans to send a government reorganization plan to Congress shortly, a comprehensive energy policy within 90 days and a welfare reform plan by May 1.

He made the remarks in the first interview of his presidency Sunday in the Oval Office, with reporters of United Press International and Associated Press.

Responding to questions, Carter said he did not contemplate a moratorium on U.S. weapons sales, because that would be "abrupt."

But he said Secretary of State Cyrus Vance will be "much more hesitant in the future to recommend to the Defense Department" arms sales agreements, and the President will have final approval before they are submitted to Congress.

Carter told reporters there was unanimity at his first National Security Council meeting on "the necessity for reducing arms sales or having very tight restraints on future commitments" in order to minimize the efforts by arms manufacturers to initiate sales early.

He also disclosed that Vice President Walter Mondale, who left for a trip to Europe and Japan Sunday, will ask U.S. allies, some of whom are "heavy arms exporters," to join in a multilateral effort to curb sales.

In addition, Carter said Vance will travel to the Middle East within a month and will urge Israel and the Arab states to hold down their arms purchases from the United States and other countries.

As for nuclear arms limitations, Carter said, "I would like to proceed quickly and aggressively with a comprehensive test ban treaty. I am in favor of eliminating the testing of all nuclear devices, instantly and completely."

The President said the Soviets have sent him "an encouraging message" on the subject but he does not know whether they will agree to it.

Carter forecast a "fairly rapid ratification" in two stages of the tentative strategic arms limitation agreement reached by Gerald Ford and Soviet Leader Leonid Brezhnev at Vladivostok in 1974.

He said he would not let controversy over inclusion of the Russian Backfire bomber and the U.S. cruise missile stand in the way of reaching early agreement.

Furthermore, Carter said, "I would like to move very quickly, even prior to the SALT II agreement, toward a much more substantive reduction in atomic weapons as the first step to

Man Held for Questioning

Girl's Frozen Body Found

ELLENVILLE — The frozen, battered body of a former Ellenville woman was found behind the Channelmaster ball field here Sunday afternoon, and Police today are questioning a young man who reportedly lived with her.

Positive identification of the body of Deborah Sue Caruso, discovered by villager Robert Madden as he was walking his dog about 4 p.m., is expected to be made this morning by the young woman's mother, Jeanette Caruso of Swan Lake Mobile Park, Napanoch.

State Police BCI and Ellenville Police are questioning Robert Babcock, with whom the 20-year-old woman had been living at 622 Lincoln Way East, Chambersburg, Pa. He was located at a hotel near here, after the body was discovered, police said.

Ellenville Police Chief George Sheeley, who was one of the first on the scene, and who called in State Police, secured the area where signs of a struggle in the snow were apparent.

Ms. Caruso's handbag lay beside the body.

BCI and Chief Sheeley said that until the body unfreezes and an autopsy is performed, probably today, the cause of death cannot be determined.

The field in which the body was discovered lies between the ball park and the flood control dike, an area frequented by snowmobilers and persons who walk the dike for exercise.

The investigation is under the direction of Capt. Donald J. Pinto of the State Police BCI. Investigator William Woods, assisting in the investigation are Wallace Hubert and R. A. Gulpin of the state police and Chief Sheeley. A state police identification expert, Ronald Korrem, was also called in.

State Audit of SUNY Camp Inconclusive

Fraud Charge Not Confirmed

NEW PALTZ — State auditors say they can't conclusively prove or disprove charges of fraud in the management of the Ashokan Field Campus of SUNY New Paltz by director Kent Reeves.

After a nine-month audit of the camp's operation, Comptroller Arthur Levitt's office has released a document which states "Although we did not find any evidence of fraud, we cannot state categorically that it did not exist because of the lack of adequate controls over the receipt and disbursement of transactions."

Reeves, who had come under fire last April for mismanagement and conflict of interest in his operation of the 375-acre recreation and education campus, now says he is suing the Faculty/Student Association and five of its individual members for $500,000 in character damages.

The audit was conducted at the request of a student active in the FSA which finances two-thirds of the camp's operation.

Reeves maintains that five students and one faculty member conspired against him in making false allegations and that the FSA as a whole acted without foundation in giving credence to the charges.

Among the major recommendations of the report are a need for "more aggressive management" of the camp by FSA and a tightening of the "especially weak" controls over cash receipts and disbursements.

The auditors noted a lack of attendance and usage records, failure of the director to keep receipts on incoming and outgoing funds, lack of adequate control over telephone, gasoline and automobile use for non-business purposes, and failure of FSA and the director to report some income and payments to the Internal Revenue Service.

Despite the negative aspects of the report, Reeves, who earns close to $22,000 a year for his duties, said this morning he was "overjoyed" by the findings which "cleared me with no ifs, ands or buts."

"Any recommendations which were made were aimed at the FSA's administration and not mine," he said. Reeves was briefly suspended from his position last spring by the FSA, which subsequently reversed its decision.

Reeves now says he expects to stay on at the Camp and is in the process of expanding programs there.

The auditors also acknowledged that they had some question as to whether a conflict of interest existed by Reeves acting as a consultant for another camp located in Dover Plains at the same time he worked at Ashokan, but could find no substantial evidence that he had favored the Dover Plains site, which offered him a per capita commission for recommendations. Auditors turned the

MARKETBASKET

Meat, Fish And Grain Prices Are Down

KINGSTON — The cost of feeding a Kingston family of four fell .7 per cent last week, bringing the cost of the 41-item market basket down from $66.76 to $66.31.

The biggest drops came in the category of grain products and canned and frozen fruits and vegetables. Market basket values for the week ending Jan. 22 were found in the meats and fish category, where the price of sirloin steak dropped about 30 cents per pound, and in the grain products category where a package of cream sandwich cookies cost about 13 cents less than the previous week.

The market basket index is compiled by the county's Consumer Information Branch of the District Attorney's Office.

The items included in the basket are a representative sampling of foods which the U.S. Department of Agriculture recommend as necessary for a nutritious diet.

World in Brief

Carter Pressing For Gas Sharing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Carter administration is preparing emergency legislation to enable natural gas firms to share supplies with firms running short.

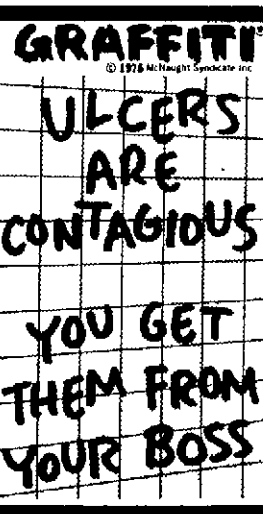

President Carter unveiled plans for the emergency request to Congress as he asked Americans to drop daytime thermostats to 65 degrees to spare natural gas reserves.

While White House energy adviser James Schlesinger said it may be a week or two before Carter submits his emergency measure to Congress, Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., said during the weekend he would introduce legislation to allow 180-day emergency sales of natural gas at unregulated prices.

Gavin Boosted For CIA Director

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Retired Army Lt. Gen. James Gavin, a longtime critic of U.S. involvement in Vietnam, has the backing of two prominent congressmen who want him to become CIA director.

But President Carter said Saturday, "I haven't made any decision at all on General Gavin" as a possible replacement for Theodore Sorensen, the President's original CIA nominee who withdrew last week under pressure.

Mondale Begins Global Mission

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) — Vice President Walter Mondale, who was sworn in last Thursday, left Washington Sunday for the first stop on a globe-circling mission for President Carter.

His mission, to relay Carter's pledge of strong ties with America's traditional allies, began with a breakfast meeting this morning with Prime Minister Leo Tindemans, in Brussels. After that he was to meet with leaders of NATO and the European Community. His 10-day trip also includes stops in Bonn, Rome, London, Paris, Berlin, the Vatican and Tokyo.

Soviets May Seek New Arms Systems

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Unless a new SALT arms control agreement is reached, the Soviet Union could have 7 to 10 new missile systems by 1985, researcher Lewis Allen Frank says in a report prepared for the U.S. Air Force.

Frank's report, published by the American Enterprise Institute Saturday, imagines what a Soviet military planner would say, given only public knowledge of U.S. intentions and capabilities.

Egg Frying Study Get 'Fleece'
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Bet you can't guess how long it takes to fry two eggs for breakfast.
The federal government spent nearly $46,000 to get the answer. It takes exactly 838 time measurement units, or TMU's if you prefer.
That finding by researchers at the Agriculture Department today won Sen. William Proxmire's "Golden Fleece of the Month" award for January.
The Wisconsin Democrat said the department spent nearly $46,000 to "lay an egg" with its discovery of how long it takes to cook breakfast.
In case you are wondering, a TMU is equal to 0.036 seconds.
"Frankly, I think it would take less time just to fry those two eggs and eat them than to translate all those TMU's into seconds on your handy calculator," Proxmire said.
The senator makes the monthly award for what he considers to be the "biggest or most ironic" example of government waste.

Dromedary Drops to Death
MALIBU, Calif. (UPI) — A one-humped camel plunged over a 150-foot cliff and landed on a winding canyon road startling weekend motorists returning from the beach.
"It was a real surprise for the motorists," a sheriff's spokesman said. "No one really knew what it was. One of our deputies walked up and said, 'Damn, it's a camel.'"
Deputies said the brown dromedary wandered away from the Moon Fire Ranch about dusk Saturday and fell off the cliff onto Topanga Canyon Boulevard about three miles north of Pacific Coast Highway.
Several motorists reported the dead animal to authorities.

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (UPI) — Eight Boy Scout Explorers sponsored by the Riverside Fire Department were among the 14 teen-agers charged last week with starting 150 fires, arson investigators said Sunday.
"It's just the tip of the iceberg in stopping the county's arson problem," a spokesman said. An investigation was expected to be completed later this week with more arrests anticipated.
Two other juveniles arrested had been volunteers with the California Division of Forestry station in the nearby community of Rubidoux.
The youths face arson charges in connection with at least 150 fires during the past two years, including brush fires that consumed hundreds of acres plus several vehicles and structures.

John Peel's Bones Dug Up
LONDON (UPI) — An antihunting group has claimed responsibility for digging up the skeleton of Britain's most famous hunter, the legendary John Peel, and said it dumped the bones into a sewage pit.
The skeleton of Peel, who died in 1854 and was immortalized in the song "Do you Ken John Peel," was dug up from its grave in the Lake district village of Caldbeck, Cumbria.
An antihunting group telephoned reporters Sunday claiming responsibility for despoiling the grave.
The anonymous caller said the group threw the bones into a nearby sewage pit, knocked down the gravestone and covered it with the mask of a dead fox to protect against foxhunting.

POLICE BEAT

Search Turns Up Cache

KINGSTON — A search of the trunk of a car used by four Newburgh youths Thursday after a shoplifting spree in Port Ewen, Woodstock and Kingston, turned up a considerable cache of stolen property and led to the arrest of one of the four today.
Ulster County Sheriff deputies arrested Catherine Murphy, 20, of Newburgh, charged her with felony possession of stolen property, arraigned her in justice court and heard her plead innocent. She was committed to Ulster County Jail in lieu of $5,000 bail.
Deputies found 94 cartons of cigarettes, a waffle iron, cosmetics, belts, shoes, umbrellas, records and liquor, as well as other items lifted from Mack Drugs, and Grand Union in Port Ewen and Woodstock.

Ms. Murphy was previously arrested with Terry Davis, 17, Charles Rickett, 23, and an unnamed juvenile last Thursday when they were observed taking cartons of cigarettes out from under their coats in the parking lot of Grand Union in Port Ewen.

All were arraigned at the time on charges of possession of stolen property, paid fines and were released.
Juvenile Aid Director Thomas Johnson said today, that subsequent investigation revealed that Davis, who said he was only 15 at the time of arrest, turned out to be a 17-year-old with a prior arrest record. The search of the car trunk was carried out after a warrant was obtained.

The investigation is continuing.

One-Car Crash
A St. Remy youth man, Mark Blowers, 21, is in poor condition today in the intensive care unit of Benedictine Hospital following a one-car crash early Sunday morning in which another passenger, Raymond Reynolds, 27, of St. Remy, was also severely injured. Reynolds is reported in fair condition.

The driver of the car, Brian Blowers, who was not injured, has been arrested by Hurley State Police and charged with driving while intoxicated. He was released in his mother's custody.

The accident occurred on the Creek Locks Road at 3:55 a.m., when Brian Blowers lost control of the car and went off the road on a sharp curve.

Mark Blowers sustained a broken right arm, wrist, shoulder and lacerations of the right temple, police said. Reynolds, received a compound fracture of the right leg, arm lacerations and facial and body lacerations to the right side.

The injured were taken to Benedictine Hospital by Don's Ambulance of Rosendale.

Pellet Gun Spree
Hurley State Police arrested six Queens, Long Island youths who were found shooting pellets guns at cars traveling the New York State Thruway in the Kingston area about 8:30 p.m., Sunday.

Charged with second degree reckless endangerment, they were confined to Ulster County Jail in lieu of $200 bail each.

Those arrested include: Juan Oramas, 18, Paul Balsara, 20, David Brosman, 19, Gene Gallo, 20, and Michael and Noel Quigley, both 18, all of Astoria.

Hobbit Burglary
Kingston City Police are investigating a burglary at the Hobbit Bar on Broadway in Kingston.
The incident was reported at 11:19 a.m. Sunday with entrance gained by a side door.

Six bottles of liquor, $211 in cash and $15 from a juke box were taken, according to the Detective Division which is investigating.

Possession Charges
City Police arrested Steven Wood, 18, of 51 Linderman Ave., Kingston and Gregory Locke, 16, of Spring Lake Trailer Park, Town of Ulster Saturday and charged them with possession of a controlled substance in the seventh degree. Locke was additionally charged with possession of a controlled substance in the fifth degree.

Youth Injured
A Town of Ulster youth was hit by a car this morning on Neighborhood Road, Lake Katrine, and was taken to the hospital by his parents, according to Town of Ulster Police who said Christopher Ulrich, 12, sustained contusions and bruises of the hand, arm and elbow.

Police said the youth was walking with other students of Lake Katrine School, when he apparently did not see a car operated by Gary O'Leary, of Blue Mountain Road, Saugerties, as it attempted to pass the children while traveling north.

Heights House Fire
Spring Lake Fire Department responded to a call to a house fire in Elmendorf Heights next to the Free Methodist Church on Sheryl Street, this morning.

The fire, believed to have started in a chimney, was confined and firemen remained on the scene this morning.

Four Gunmen Observed
MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Four gunmen today kidnaped a senior army general who heads the judiciary system of the armed forces, government officials said.

General Emilio Villaescusa Quilis, 64, was seized as he left his downtown Madrid home to be driven to his office, Spanish news agency reports said.

The kidnapers pulled him into a yellow car and drove off at high speed, the reports said.

There was no immediate official government statement, but government officials confirmed that Villaescusa had been kidnaped.

The kidnaping came six weeks after self-styled left-wing urban guerrillas abducted Spain's No. 4 government official. They are still holding Antonio Maria de Oriol y Urquijo, president of the Council of State, as a hostage for the release of political prisoners.

Villaescusa, 64, is president of the Supreme Council of Military Justice, a kind of supreme court of the armed forces' judiciary. In that position, he has the last word on the release of those political prisoners who were jailed by military tribunals — an estimated half of Spain's remaining 170 political prisoners.

Police began to set up roadblocks on highway leading out of Madrid and stepped up vigilance at airports and railway stations following his abduction.

The kidnaping occurred in O'Donnell St. that runs along the central Retiro Park.

Europa Press said that while there was no firm indication yet as to the motive of the kidnaping, it was believed that Villaescusa was seized by the same organization that is holding Oriol — the "Antifascist Resistance Group Oct. 1," known by the acronym GRAPO.

Police believe GRAPO is a Communist splinter group. But other left-wing organizations have said they have no contacts with GRAPO and, in fact, do not know who its members are. Some Spanish newspapers have speculated the group is backed or manipulated by the extreme right.

In numerous messages to the government and the public, GRAPO has alternately demanded a general political amnesty or the release of 15 convicted terrorists who, the guerrillas said, must be flown to Algeria.

In their latest message last week they accused the government of stalling on the prisoner release and threatened to strike new "heavy blows."

Soviet Economy Had Very Bad Year

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet economy in 1976 grew at one of the slowest rates in years, with some sectors not even matching the modest goals set by planners, authorities have announced.

Figures released by the Central Statistical Board during the weekend showed that some gains in industrial output were the smallest since World War II.

Although no official explanation of the slowdown was reported, Western economists have attributed it to the 1975 harvest disaster and a desire by planners to emphasize quality over quantity.

Growth rate goals were set lower than at any time in the past 25 years apparently so that factories and enterprises would be spared the frequent end of the year rush to meet the plan.

with a flood of shoddy goods. In fact, the board reported "the technical level and quality of a number of production items are still low."

The statistical board reported that industrial output in 1976 increased 4.8 per cent, 0.5 per cent higher than planned but considerably less than the 7.5 per cent increase in 1975 and 8 per cent a year earlier.

The so-called light industry portion of the economy, which produces consumer goods, achieved a growth rate of 3 per cent, marginally above the 2.7 per cent goal. The target was only half the 6 per cent growth rate set in 1975.

The Soviets reported increased production of automobiles, television sets, washing machines and refrigerators. Heavy industry increased 5.5 per cent, well above the 4.9 per cent goal. The 1976 planned increase was 7 per cent.

Steel production was 145 million tons — 2 million below the plan. Soviet oil production, which now leads the world, was 520 million tons, an increase of 30 million tons over 1975.

The statistical board said the national income, a figure similar but not equal to the gross national product reported in Western countries, increased 5 per cent instead of the planned 5.4 per cent.

Labor productivity increased 3.3 per cent, off 0.1 per cent of the planned figure. Because of the declining birthrate in developed sections of the country, labor productivity is being increasingly relied upon to achieve economic growth.

County Civil Service Sets Exams

KINGSTON — The Ulster County Civil Service Commission has announced open competitive exams for school business manager and dog warden to be held on March 19.

Last date for filing applications to qualify for either job is Feb. 16.

The eligible list resulting from the business manager exam will be used to fill vacancies as they occur in all Ulster County school districts. The starting salaries vary according to the location of the appointment.

There is now a dog warden position available in the Town of Saugerties. The eligible list resulting from that exam will be used to fill this and other vacancies as they occur. The starting salaries vary. Candidates for both jobs must have been legal residents of the county for at least four months immediately preceding the date of the written test.

Applications and further details about the positions can be obtained from the Civil Service Commission in the county office building, Kingston.

City ZBA Holds Hearing Tuesday

KINGSTON — The city's Zoning Board of Appeals will conduct a public hearing Tuesday night to consider five requests from Kingston property owners who are seeking either special permits or variances.

Frank and Tana De Cicco are asking for a special permit to do tailoring and selling of bridal garments at their home at 170 Albany Ave. Special permits are granted on a one year basis and must be renewed annually.

Robert and Fredrick Supples, owners of a home at 32-34 Hurley Ave., are seeking to renew their variance and convert their two-family dwelling into a four family dwelling. A variance, which remains with a property once it is granted, must be acted upon within one year of its issuance or it must be renewed.

Charles Lanier Jr. and Martin Pulver, co owners of a parcel at 587-591 Abeel St., are asking the ZBA to consider their request to erect two chain link fences, each six feet high, across their driveway for protective purposes. The city allows for only four foot fences without a variance.

The owner of the 84 St. James St. parcel, Norman Risdal, is requesting a variance to continue the nonconforming use of his residence as an owner occupied first floor office.

A variance at the former Children's Home, 79-83 East Chester St., is being sought by the Kingston Lions Club. The Lions would like to convert the building into a shared facility with meeting rooms.

All owners, agents, representatives or purchasers must be in attendance at the hearing or the request will be automatically denied.

The hearing gets underway at 7:30 p.m. in the Common Council chamber at City Hall.

Senate Republicans Propose Plan For Cutting Taxes $76 Million

ALBANY (UPI) — Countering Democratic Gov. Hugh Carey's budget proposals, the Republican majority in the Senate has unveiled a score of bills, including four which would reduce taxes by $76 million.

The proposal with the largest impact on state revenues would repeal the sales tax on home heating fuels, saving taxpayers an estimated $61 million.

Legislative sources indicated there would be a push to pass the heating bill and forward it to the Democrat dominated Assembly while bitterly cold weather still gripped the state.

Senate Finance Committee Chairman John Marchi said the bill, co-sponsored by 34 Republicans, would cut heating costs by 4 per cent and would apply to fuel oil, natural gas, electricity, coal and propane gas used for home heating.

The lost revenue could "be more than offset by legislative reductions in the governor's operating budget," the Staten Island Republican said.

The heating bill was expected to receive a quick and favorable report from the Finance Committee, possibly this week.

The 20 bill "Senate Republican action program," was announced Sunday by Senate Majority Leader Warren Anderson.

One proposal sponsored by Sen. Lloyd Paterson of Niagara Falls, would cut $10 million in corporate franchise taxes for New York firms.

Anderson sponsored bills to repeal $2 million in unincorporated business taxes on farms and to increase exemptions under the farm estate tax by $1 million.

The Senate Republicans, not unmindful of the temperature, "would attempt to 'use the thermometer as a political lever' to induce Assembly Democrats to support the energy proposal, one source predicted.

Republican legislative leaders have also called for an end to temporary bank and business tax surcharges which Carey has insisted must be extended to balance the state's $11.345 billion 1977-78 budget, which he unveiled last week.

Other GOP bills would tighten the freedom of information law, mandate jail sentences for those guilty of using deadly weapons while committing a felony and require public employers to bargain in good faith with employee unions.

Accrual accounting in state fiscal operations, so-called zero based budgeting and a constitutional change to allow limitations on malpractice settlements were the subjects of several other proposals.

'Gambling Epidemic' Besets U.S.

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — The United States is in the midst of a "gambling epidemic," says a University of Colorado sociologist who has spent 10 years studying gambling in America.

"There's no swine flu epidemic, but there's a gambling epidemic and there's more to come," said Tomas Martinez, who has interviewed hundreds of gamblers and watched them wager. "But it could take maybe 10 years until government policy recognizes it."

Martinez said recent studies indicate there are four million to 10 million compulsive gamblers in the United States. He said such compulsive gamblers wager for the same reason alcoholics drink or drug addicts use heroin — to get high.

"Compulsive gamblers usually find that nothing else turns them on like

"Like drugs or stealing are for other people, it's an exciting thing like nothing else in the world. It becomes an addiction."

The sociologist says gamblers often see themselves "as having prestige, performing daring and forceful actions." He said one compulsive gambler for instance would imagine himself as an international gambler with international money backing him.

"Since compulsive gamblers are reasonably adept at playing, they could and do play for long periods of time — often until fatigued," said Martinez. "Fatigue combined with overindulgence takes its toll. Betting becomes irrational and losing results."

Martinez said a person could become a compulsive gambler in about six months but the process often takes longer. He said compulsive gamblers come from all social classes and find forms of gambling suited to their preferences.

"That's the beauty, or danger, of gambling," he said. "If you're a social person, you can play cards and face off with people. If you're a loner, you can bet on horses."

Martinez said compulsive gambling, like any addiction, can lead its victims to such consequences as loss of job, jail, family breakup and attempted suicide.

He said the cure rate for chapters of Gamblers Anonymous is only about 10 per cent and the cure is not necessarily permanent.

Philippine Troops Rescue Hostages

MANILA, the Philippines (UPI) — Government troops today shot and killed a gunman holding a 3-year-old girl and her nursemaid and rescued the hostages unharmed, officials reported.

The officials said government soldiers and sharpshooters riddled the man, identified as Lorenzo (Warren) Balane, with bullets just outside the home of Filipino Chinese businessman Eduardo Coo, ending a tense 30-hour drama.

Coo's young daughter was rescued unharmed. Balane had freed the girl's nursemaid only minutes earlier.

Observers near the scene in the suburban district of Makati heard gunshots but it was not immediately known if the troops stormed the home or picked off the gunman from a distance.

Balane, a former drum player armed with a .45 caliber automatic pistol, had demanded a ransom of more than a half million dollars and safe passage to either Libya or Israel in return for the release of his hostages.

He had entered Coo's home early Sunday afternoon, shot and wounded a guest and seized Coo's daughter and four-year-old son. Later, Coo was permitted to carry his son from the home and Balane asked that the nursemaid be allowed to enter to take care of the girl.

Coo shuttled back and forth from the home to authorities headquartered in a school bus, carrying messages and a series of demands from Balane throughout the night.

Early Monday morning Balane requested and received a long-sleeved silk shirt and blue suede pants. He also asked for newspapers and Harold Robbins' novel "The Pirate."

Boyhood friends said Balane was a frequent drug user.

Balane told a Manila newspaper reporter that he wanted $20,000 distributed to Manila's poor, $500,000 for himself and a plane to take him to either Libya or Israel.

Balane told the reporter "I have no quarrel with the government. My action is mine. There is no politics in this and I do not subscribe to violence. All I want is to fly out of the country."

He said he would surrender only to President Ferdinand E. Marcos or his daughter, Imee Marcos.

An Open Letter to the Community

January 22nd marked the anniversary of the tragic, divided decision of the Supreme Court, which, in effect, struck down practically all legal and social barriers to abortion. We call the decision tragic for two reasons, especially. First, because we are dealing here with the direct control over the life and death of innocent people. We feel that a human court has boldly assumed unto itself a power that belongs to God. It is frightening to have a basic right—that to life—swept aside so abruptly. Our second reason for using the word tragic is that this decision has been the major cause of an avalanche of abortion and legal consequences which have committed us to a social course of anti-life.

We feel we have a right to speak out to the community on this vital moral crisis.

We also have an obligation to speak out. Mount Saint Alphonsus is a theological institution which is vitally interested and deeply involved in the religious and moral life of this whole Hudson Valley area. Not to speak, we are convinced, would be a betrayal of what we stand for and work for in this community.

We held before, and still hold, that this decision of the Supreme Court was wrong. We hope and work for its reversal.

We make this statement without bitterness—and we hope it will not be received with bitterness. We also make it with a real sensitivity to the turmoil arising from an unwanted pregnancy. But we make it with the firm conviction that abortion is a wrong solution. This anniversary is a reminder of a decision which attacks moral values that are essential to all human living and the fabric of the world we live in.

High School Tells Snow Day Plans

KINGSTON — In case bad weather forces closing of schools Tuesday or Wednesday, Kingston High School examinations will take place on schedule, with a few exceptions.

Students who come to school for exams will be expected to provide their own transportation on these two days if the rest of the district is closed, Principal Dan H. Allen said.

All KHS exams will take place as scheduled Tuesday, bad weather or not. If bad weather occurs Wednesday, all exams except basic competency reading and math will take place on schedule.

Freeman Readers Write

Dear Editor:

The undersigned were requested by representatives of several Ulster County Towns to prepare and circulate a resolution asking local and state legislators to support existing New York State law granting towns the right to appoint town constables. The resolution was prepared and circulated to all Ulster County town supervisors for action by their town boards.

We were amazed to read in the Jan. 16 Sunday Freeman that the Saugerties Town Board believes our support of existing law may be unlawful. We were equally surprised that elected town officials could refuse to defend their town's right to self-government against encroachment by an appointed state agency.

New York State legislators enacted town law which grants towns the right to appoint town constables as law enforcement officers.

They clarified the authority of constables by designating them as "peace" officers and assigning peace officers virtually all of the powers of "police" officers in making an arrest without a warrant.

Many Ulster County towns are pleased with the quality of law enforcement provided by their constables and have supported them with training opportunities and modern equipment.

Other towns decided in favor of organized police departments under New York State Civil Service Law.

The position taken in our resolution is that elected town officials are the proper persons to decide how the townspeople's money should be budgeted to provide the level of service the people need. Surely all town boards believe they have the right and obligation to make this decision freely, without coercion.

The Saugerties Town Board should reconsider their hasty decision and join with other Ulster County towns in support of existing New York State Law and home rule for our towns.

Join Fight Against Utilities

Dear Editor:

Letter to Ernest J. Gardner, new majority leader of the Ulster County Legislature:

Congratulations and best Mr. Gardner, for your success as chairman of the Ulster County Legislature. We and our neighbors are Republicans, Democrats and Independents, and, yet, we are able to agree on the solutions of such problems as the telephone and Central Hudson utilities, taxes, welfare, etc. Most of us have never been active before in speaking out and acting to demand a solution to these problems, but now we must. The pressures on us are too great.

What we are distressed about is the lack of response on the part of our elected officials in Ulster County. Why should Mr. Hinchey be the only elected official who speaks out and joins us in our fight against the utilities?

We sincerely hope that you, sir, will create, by your own leadership, a change in the relationship between our elected officials and the fight of the people for their rights.

We trust that in this coming period we will have a county legislature who will relate to and lead us on all issues facing us and not just sit in the legislative chambers working only on county business — important as that is.

Radiation Our Salvation

Dear Editor:

We need no longer worry over pollution, radiation, war, violence, crime or poverty!

The process of creative mutation, that is, placing nuclear generators in and about critical areas, international weapons testing, and best of all, probable nuclear, thermonuclear, or neutronic war, will provide us with descendants capable of adapting to atmospheric poisons, the plague that will follow and the frigid, sunless space our off-orbit planet will inhabit.

They will, if they survive, and of course the unfit will be weeded out, be supermen (women).

In their superior adaptability, possibly surpassing that talent of cockroaches, they might be unrecognizable, even monstrous to us limited general-type anthropoids; but let's not be narrow-minded. Look to the future of the human(?) race, hurrah!

Sick Vet Got Big Response

Dear Editor:

I want to thank you very much for having my letter published in the Daily Freeman and I want to thank all the wonderful people for sending me get well cards and birthday cards. I received a lot of mail and it made me very happy. I lived in Kingston in 1957 for 11 months. I am a 53-year-old disabled veteran of World War II. I have to go back in the hospital on the 26th of January. I have a liver infection. My doctor said I will be in the hospital two or more weeks. Anyone who would still want to send me a get well card, letter or anything to read while I am in the hospital would be very much appreciated. I will have my friends bring in my mail to me every day while I am in the hospital.

Firemen Did Outstanding Job

Dear Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to commend our city's paid and volunteer firemen for the outstanding job they did on the Beef House fire on Jan. 16.

As myself and my husband reside immediately across the street from the Beef House, we were quite worried about the intense heat and flames on the roof of the restaurant, which were approximately 30 feet from our windows.

The firemen proved incomparable as they battled the blaze under extreme cold and windy conditions, and managed to limit damage in the surrounding buildings to a bare minimum. As we watched the fire from our window for most of the night, we could see the difficulty involved in fighting the fire with the ice covered streets and hoses.

I feel that the residents of Kingston should join me in commending the efforts of the local firefighters during this most dangerous situation, and be proud that they are standing by to serve us.

City Arterial Is Unsound

Dear Editor:

Concerning the letter to the editor by Bradley Wilson of "Out of Work Taxpayers."

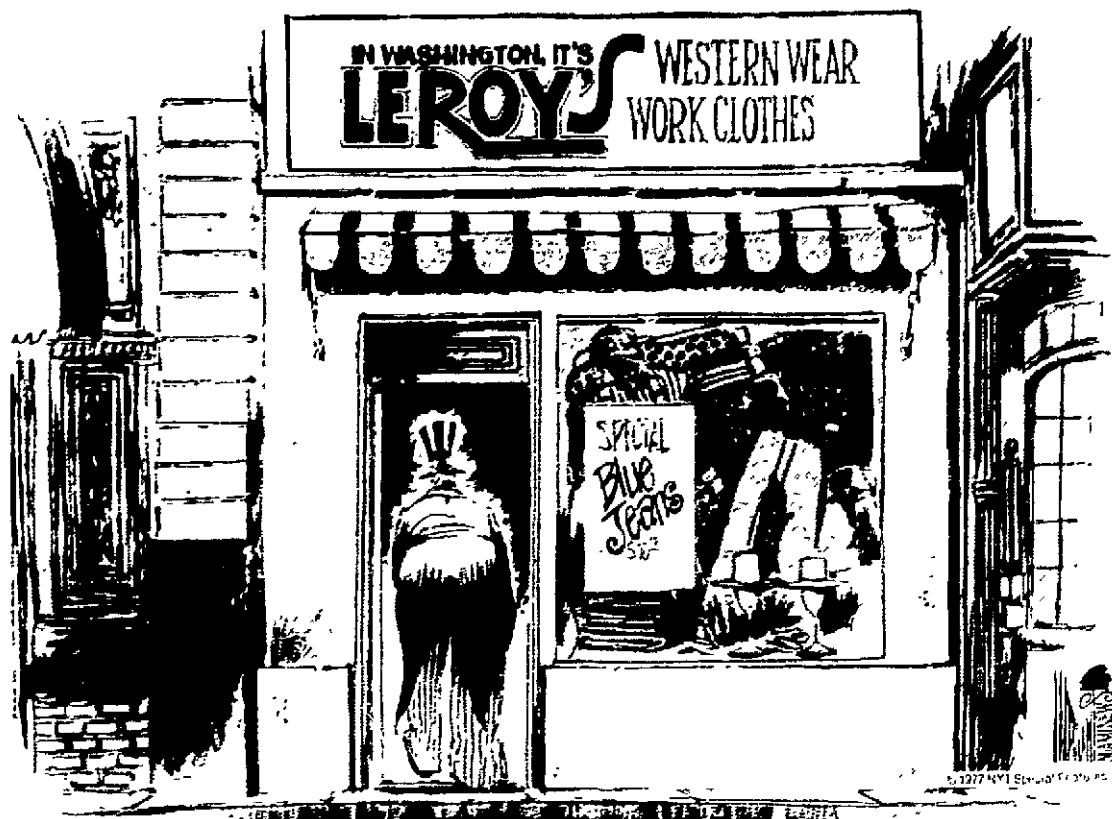

No one is trying to keep you unemployed Mr. Wilson, but why do we taxpayers have to shell out hard earned money for a road that no one needs, goes nowhere and will destroy more homes and land than help the local economy.

We cannot continue to tear down buildings just to keep jobs, it is economically unsound. There are, however, so many places in Kingston and the area that could be fixed up — roads, old buildings, and general clean-up of the more shabby parts of Kingston.

We must change by educating ourselves to the future needs, ours and our children of this county, and not sit in resentment of the present and the past.

Flapdoodling The Economy

WASHINGTON - The Carter people called their recommendations for the economy "a package." The New York Times described it as "eclectic and nonideological."

Nonideological is a word supposed to be taken as a compliment inasmuch as it implies one is practical, down-to-earth and free of the blinders of orthodoxy. In this case, though, nonideological may mean confused, uncertain and bereft of the kind of theoretical understandings that help serve as some sort of guide as to what to do.

The last tax rebate may have helped increase the velocity and tempo of business but it had only the most negligible effect on employment. The time is past when lifting the increase in the gross national product to 6 percent or more automatically guarantees full employment. We have a lot of people who are unemployed by reason of age, lack of training, demoralization or whatever else. How large a portion of the total unemployed they represent isn't certain, but it's not small. For many in these categories we really have no programs that we can realistically rely on to get such people on a payroll.

The easiest people among the chronically unemployed to deal with are those whose only deficiency is a lack of training. Whether we can train them to perform tasks for which there may be a real demand is a different question, however. The structures of government and those portions of the private sector that are primarily government contractors have perfected a new species of employee, the person who is highly trained to look busy, efficient, productive and needed, but who in fact has no other function than to stay on the payroll and out of the unemployment statistics.

At the same time our society will continue to live through the anomaly of high unemployment and the impossibility of hiring anyone to do a variety of highly skilled jobs, ranging from clockmaking to cabinetry.

Carter's eclectic, nonideological package also includes a dose of negative income tax in the proposal to give rebates to Social Security pensioners too poor to have paid any taxes. Again, the beneficiaries certainly need the help, but the introduction of the negative income tax without using it as a lever to dismember the social work bureaucracy is unfortunate. After all, one of the main arguments for the negative income tax is that this system of payment should do away with the need for all those damn caseworkers.

All of the above plus the money to be spent on public works programs is supposed to cost in the neighborhood of $15 billion, which may or may not, depending on who is doing the stargazing, contribute to a budget deficit of between 60 and 75 billion. That's just not as awful as it sounds. Contrary to popular fulminations, deficits per se don't cause inflation.

It's how deficits are handled. Do we print money to cover them or do we borrow? If we borrow we don't fuel inflation; if we print, we do.

That's not up to Mr. Carter to decide, but to Arthur Burns, the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. As usual Dr. Burns, a holdover Nixon appointee, isn't saying what he is going to do. In the end this kind of eclectic - flapdoodle would be a better word - way of approaching matters may get us by the next year or two, but it is no way to plan an economy and, whether we are ready to admit it to ourselves, we now expect, actual demand that the government do just that. To plan the American economy, new machinery, more coordination, less eclecticism and much less flapdoodle is needed.

James Earl Ray Mystery — IV

The white Mustang cruised the streets of Memphis slowly. James Earl Ray was ready for his "one big lick." The Memphis newspaper stated that Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was staying at the Lorraine Motel with his entourage. The Smiler had to find a room facing King's quarters.

A loser works twice as hard as a winner. Driving past the Lorraine, Ray surely noticed that the backs of sleazy rooming houses on Main Street looked down on King's room. The distance was 225 feet. Staring through a rifle scope, the target would appear to be 32 feet distant.

It is certain that he had help. His car trunk held men's clothing suitable for a short slender man - not Ray's size. The ashtray was deep with dead butts. Ray never smoked. The car carpet on the right front seat was thick with caked mud. Ray was obsessively neat.

On April 1st, 1968, the Smiler had $10.50 in cash. Two days later, he had $1,050 in his pocket. His anonymous boss told him how to get out of town: go a few blocks to the Arkansas-Riverside Drive, turn left, go down Route 55, make a right and drive across the Memphis-Arkansas Bridge and head for Birmingham. Or get on 78 and into the state of Mississippi.

There would be money. Lots of it. An airline ticket was ready for a flight to Canada. From there to London. Then on to Lisbon for a final conference before flying to Rhodesia. The U.S. had no extradition treaty with Rhodesia. It was a place, he had been told, where the blacks "knew their place."

The rooming house on Main was a cheap, no-questions-asked, cash-in-advance place. Bessie Brewer was accustomed to unwashed drunks. She looked up at Ray and saw a brown suit, a figured tie, a clean, smiling face. He wanted a room in the back.

She had a 5-B. There was a 6-B, next to the bathroom, but it was occupied by a man and a woman. Ray paid Mrs. Brewer $8.50 for a week's rent. After that, he spent considerable time in and out of the bathroom. As always, Ray had forgotten something. Binoculars.

It was 3:30 p.m., April 4th. The sun would be down at 6:30. He drove to the York Arms Company, near Beale Street, and bought 7-by-50 glasses. He was impatient to pay the $41.55. When he returned to Main, he found a parking space in front of Mrs. Brewer's rooming house.

In Room 6-B, Charles Stephens and his common-law wife heard the whispered footsteps in and out of the bathroom. Ray locked himself in. He stood in the bathtub, punched a rusty screen out and down into the yard, and raked the porch of the Lorraine with the binoculars. Someone turned the bathroom doorknob, and walked away.

Someone came back. Ray said, "In a minute!" His fingerprints were all over the window sill, on the wall, and on the tub. He left. He waited. He returned. The second floor porch of the Lorraine was alive with traffic.

At 6 p.m. a limousine stopped below the porch. The blacks began to emerge from Room 306 of the Lorraine. The Rev. Billy Kyles said they had to leave at once for dinner. He waited on an outside stairwell. The Rev. Andrew Young started down the steps.

Neighborhood blacks collected around the limousine, looking up. They wanted, just once, to see the round face of the man who fought their fight in peace. The Rev. Jesse Jackson watched Dr. King emerge from his room, patting aftershave lotion. "You remember Ben Branch?" Jackson said.

King stopped at the rail and looked down. "I remember him from Chicago," he said. "He played 'Precious Lord.' The Rev. Bernard Lee said that Dr. King should wear a topcoat. Across the street, the Smiler put the binoculars down, pulled the heavy rifle up, and stared through the crosshairs.

There was a sound like two flat boards being slapped together. The bullet, flying three times the speed of sound, caught Dr. King a half-inch below the right side of his lip, shattered his jaw, moved downward and severed his spinal cord. The shot slammed him backwards against the wall.

A white man emerged from Room 308. He was James Laue, sent by the FBI to shadow Dr. King wherever he went. He was too late to do anything.

James Earl Ray was spotted by a roomer, Willy Anchues, as he left the bathroom. "That sounded like a shot," Anchues said. Ray nodded. "Yes," he said. "It was."

Was there a conspiracy to kill Dr. King? You bet there was...

Justice Dept. Sides With Booze Barons

WASHINGTON — Despite the fact that some additives used in alcohol have turned out to be toxic, the booze barons have fought for the right to hide the ingredients from the public.

Now the Justice Dept.'s antitrust chief, Donald G. Baker, has sided with them. He reached his decision after huddling privately last month with six representatives from the alcohol industry. Other federal officials were present, but no consumer advocates were invited.

The issue is whether the Justice Dept. should appeal a ruling by a lower court, which upheld the liquor industry's right to conceal the ingredients its customers drink. The court is located in the heart of Kentucky's bourbon country, and its proximity to the booze business may have affected its view of the law.

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA), which is supposed to protect the public from harmful food, drugs and drinks, would like to compel the liquor lords to reveal their secret recipes. For some brewers have been known to mix dangerous ingredients in their alcohol.

For example, several brewers added cobalt sulfate to their beer a decade ago. This is a metallic substance, which forms a big, foamy head. But for some beer drinkers, the appetizing foam turned out to be deadly. At least 50 died from the cobalt-alcoholic mixture.

Afterward, two doctors complained: "Had this metal been known to be present in beer ... the prompt administration of (an antidote) might have saved some of our patients."

Under federal law, the FDA can compel producers to list the ingredients in their foods and drinks. But for the sake of bureaucratic peace, the FDA gave up its jurisdiction over the liquor industry years ago. Jurisdiction then was assumed by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, which has been lax about enforcing the labeling laws.

Under pressure from consumer groups, ATF drafted regulations in 1975 that would require liquor labels to list the ingredients. The liquor industry responded with some counter-pressure of its own. Sources say, and the ATF quietly withdrew the regulations.

The Food and Drug Administration, however, did not remain quiet. Commissioner Alexander Schmidt contended that consumers ought to know what they are drinking. He informed ATF chief Rex Davis, therefore, that FDA would make the brewers label their ingredients, whether the ATF liked it or not.

This arbitrary FDA action caused the booze barons to start jumping like corks popping out of champagne bottles. Several wine and spirits groups joined in filing a lawsuit. They shopped around for a sympathetic court and chose the federal district court in Owensboro, Ky.

Last August, Judge James Cordon ruled that the ATF, not the FDA, had exclusive jurisdiction over the labeling of alcoholic beverages. This is precisely how the alcohol industry wanted the judge to rule, since the ATF was willing to let the whiskey makers keep their ingredients hidden.

But the FDA's chief counsel, Richard Merrill, fired off a confidential memo to the Justice Dept., requesting that Judge Gordon's decision be appealed. The memo charged that the decision "negates Congress' determination that consumers are entitled to know the composition of the products they consume."

The memo also warned that, if the decision isn't challenged, the FDA will be powerless "to bring misbranding charges" against miscreant liquor companies.

Yet antitrust chief Baker, after meeting with the alcohol representatives, recommended letting Judge Gordon's ruling stand. It's now up to the Solicitor General, who has the final say.

Word of the backstage manipulations reached Rep. Ben Rosenthal, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Consumer Subcommittee, who protested privately to the Justice Dept. He wrote bluntly that "the consumer community believes the ATF has shirked its consumer protection responsibilities" and that "allowing Judge Gordon's ruling to stand will undermine greatly the consumers' faith in ... government."

Footnote: A Justice Dept. spokesman said Baker would not comment because his recommendation was before the Solicitor. At press time, the Solicitor's office had made no final decision. An attorney for the liquor companies said the cost of listing ingredients would be prohibitive. The present regulations, he insisted, are adequate to safeguard the drinking public.

GAMBLING GUIDELINES: In New Jersey, state investigators will take a close look at the business groups that have bought up property in Atlantic City, which could become the Monte Carlo of the East Coast.

The investigators suspect that some groups may be fronts for organized crime. The lobbying to legalize gambling in Atlantic City was intensive. More than $1 million was poured into the campaign. State investigators believe much of this money came from mob sources.

Cold Continues As Gas Dwindles

By UPI

Bitter cold drained dangerously low gas supplies in Pennsylvania and Ohio today, prompting a natural gas emergency in Ohio. Cold-weather problems caused by a week-long cold wave plagued much of the east, despite milder temperatures.

A respite from arctic temperatures brought yet another storm across the winter-weary midlands today.

Lingering sub-zero temperatures prompted Ohio Gov. James Rhodes to declare a natural gas emergency to deal with the worst energy crisis in Ohio history. The state legislature was called into special session Tuesday to deal with the growing problem of cold weather and dwindling fuel supplies.

Cold weather also persisted in Pennsylvania, where depleted gas and fuel supplies prompted a state of emergency last week.

Schools remained closed in much of Pennsylvania, Ohio and Tennessee and energy cutbacks idled thousands of workers in Tennessee, Georgia and Mississippi. Power and gas reductions continued from Minnesota to New York despite milder temperatures.

Civil defense officials in Asheville, N.C., distributed water to between 1,200 and 1,400 families whose water pipes froze during last week's cold wave. County officials said many of the families without water also "needed

Police Deaths Down

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nearly 20 per cent fewer law enforcement officers were killed in 1976 than the year before, according to the FBI.

"I am hopeful that the intensified examination by the law enforcement profession under the circumstances leading to these killings is producing better equipment and procedures which will further reduce them in the future," FBI Director Clarence Kelley said in a statement Sunday.

The FBI said 109 federal, state and local law enforcement officers were killed last year, 20 fewer than in 1975.

Six died in December compared to 15 in December 1975, it said in a report covering all U.S. and Puerto Rican law enforcement officers.

The FBI said 93 of the 1976 victims were killed by firearms, 65 by handguns. Thirteen victims were killed by their own service weapons, it said.

food or some type of fuel."

The U.S. Agriculture Department's Florida Emergency Board are to meet today to determine whether the recent Florida cold wave was disastrous. A favorable recommendation from the board would allow Florida Gov. Reubin Askew to ask President Carter for an emergency declaration authorizing low-cost loans and special unemployment insurance.

Up to 40 per cent of Florida's citrus crop, 75 per cent of the winter vegetable crop and 95 per cent of the ornamental plants in nurseries were wiped out in last week's five-day freeze.

Moderating temperatures brought snow and sleet to the midlands.

Four inches of snow hit parts of Kansas and Missouri Sunday.

Snow spread over the lower Ohio Valley and freezing rain covered much of the lower Mississippi Valley, the Tennessee Valley and portions of Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana today. Light snow dusted the Great Lakes and spread over the Appalachians.

Travel advisories were posted today for portions of Southern Illinois, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland for up to three inches of snow. Freezing rain prompted travel advisories for parts of Arkansas and Georgia.

City Fathers Give In To Changing Life Style

LAWRENCE, Kan. (UPI) — In the college town of Lawrence a couple who wants to set up house no longer needs a marriage license.

The city commission decided to repeal a decades-old ordinance against cohabitation partly because it was unenforceable and partly because the commissioners agreed the statute was widely ignored.

"It's going on all over the city," said assistant city manager Mike Wildren. "It's probably a result of changing life styles."

The ordinance, 20 to 30 years old, was removed from the city code quietly and without fanfare during a code revision completed in early January, Mayor Fred Pence said.

"There didn't seem to be any objections," Pence said of the city council meetings when the revisions were discussed and approved.

"I think the whole concept is that if you have a law on the books, and it's not constitutional, you better get it off there," Pence said. "And if it's unenforceable, you better get rid of it."

Pence, an outspoken man who runs a gardening center, said the law had not been prosecuted because it was vague. Wildren agreed.

"It was nebulous, and it was unenforceable," Wildren said. "We don't have anybody go out and check. We don't have any complaints on it, and in a university town, you'd have to have somebody on every corner."

complete elimination in the future." "If we can reach an agreement with the Soviet Union for major reductions on atomic weapons, of course the next step would be to get other atomic nations to try to join in this effort, including, of course, France and England and the People's Republic of China," he said.

Carter also said the United States will try to halt the expansion of nuclear arms capability "with every means available to us" in diplomatic channels.

Wearing a blue-gray tweed suit and sipping coffee, the President sat on a sofa before a glowing fire in the fireplace and spoke with some reverence about the White House.

"It is really awe inspiring," he said, calling his tour of the Lincoln suite and the Treaty Room a "very sobering ... very gratifying experience."

"I can't say that I feel completely at ease with it yet," he said, while adding: "I feel good about it. I have enjoyed it so far ... I think I will like it very much. Good working conditions."

Carter said he intends to carry out his campaign commitments, and is "keeping a very close inventory for promises that are made."

He said he feels "quite at ease about the percentage of blacks" hired to top-level positions so far, but he acknowledged being "not completely satisfied with what we have done" in terms of hiring more women for good jobs.

"But we will try to compensate for this as we go along," he said.

Carter called his order pardoning all

Vietnam draft evaders on his first full day in office "a proper thing to do," and said, "It is one that I feel very much at ease with. It is something that should have been done. I was very grateful to be the one to do it."

On other subjects, Carter said:

— Criticism that he will yield too much to Congress is "erroneous." He said he will be "very aggressive and very adamant" in pursuing promises he made in the campaign, but believes in prior consultation with Congress to hold down the clashes where possible.

— He believes his $30 billion, two-year economic stimulus package is "a good one" and a "proper figure" for giving the ailing economy a shot in the arm.

— A peace conference on the Middle East is "very likely this year" and Vance will confer with heads of state in Israel, Egypt, Syria, Saudi Arabia and Jordan in depth on the subject. Many of the leaders will be invited to visit Carter in Washington after Vance visits them.

— If the Palestinians are invited to the conference "as agreed by the other participating nations, along with us, it would probably be as part of one of the Arab delegations. But that is something still to be decided."

— He believes "very strongly" in majority rule in Africa, "which means relinquishing the control of the government by the white minorities in the countries affected."

— U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young will go to the 14-nation African meeting in Tanzania as an observer, not as a negotiator.

— He was "well briefed" during the transition period and while he does not have all the answers as he assumes his presidency, "I haven't been disconcerted or surprised."

matter over to the university's legal department for further investigation.

FSA spokesperson Olga Diez declined comment on the report because FSA has not yet received a "final copy" of the auditors recommendations.

"As soon as we do have that report in our hands, I personally, will be making a statement," she said.

Mrs. Diez said she had received no formal indications that a lawsuit was being brought by Reeves and further denied the director's statement that FSA would be issuing him a formal letter of apology at its Feb. 1 meeting.

"That's Mr. Reeves story," she said. The auditors did recommend that the FSA reimburse the state for work performed by Reeves, not related to his duties as a state employee. The state pays one-third of his salary.

Controls over camp receipts and disbursements were inadequate, the audit report said, and purchases were not offered for competitive bidding. Further, it said, employee records were loosely kept, as were records relating to camp equipment and inventories.

Although the FSA provided more than $90,000 for camp operations for the four year period ending June 30, 1976, no records were kept to indicate the amount of usage by students or staff, the report said, in recommending registration tallies be kept.

Billy and Good Ol' Boys Booze Way Back Home

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Appearing a bit more rundown than when they arrived, Billy Carter and his friends left Washington just as they came — drinking beer.

But Sunday morning the beer was Schlitz on tap in the "Rough Rider Room" bar at National Airport, instead of his favorite Pabst. An airport guard asked him not to drink his own out in the lobby.

"He was nice about it," said Carter as he sat quietly with three or four friends. "He said it was against the law and he might get in trouble if he let me do it."

Carter, his gas station friends and several dozen folks from Plains were awaiting their plane home after four days of inauguration festivities.

"I'm ready to sleep in my own bed tonight," said one of Carter's friends, perched next to him on a bar stool.

Carter, too, was ready to go home, especially after seeing his hotel bill.

"Billy owns a piece of the hotel," said a friend.

Carter and his friends engaged in an almost constant four-day party, mostly in the privacy of his hotel suite where he could unwind with friends and family away from constant public recognition as the President's brother.

He found time to attend his brother's swearing in ceremony Thursday, visit the White House, and do a little sightseeing Saturday to view the treasures of King Tutankhamun.

Fire Fatal

GRANTS PASS, Ore. (UPI) — A mother and five of her children were killed Sunday in a fire that destroyed their home on a remote mining claim, the Josephine County Sheriff's office reported.

The victims were identified as Joyce Fay Strickland, 34, Randall, 11, Tamatha, 9, Steven Weldon, 6, Connie Sue, 3, and 1-year-old Matthew Gregory.

you'll be in a heap of hot water."

As he walked from the bar, he bumped into a black airline worker in coveralls, who stuck out his hand and said, "Well, we did it, didn't we?"

The ordinance, 20 to 30 years old, was removed from the city code quietly and without fanfare during a code revision completed in early January, Mayor Fred Pence said.

"There didn't seem to be any objections," Pence said of the city council meetings when the revisions were discussed and approved.

"I think the whole concept is that if you have a law on the books, and it's not constitutional, you better get it off there," Pence said. "And if it's unenforceable, you better get rid of it."

Pence, an outspoken man who runs a gardening center, said the law had not been prosecuted because it was vague. Wildren agreed.

"It was nebulous, and it was unenforceable," Wildren said. "We don't have anybody go out and check. We don't have any complaints on it, and in a university town, you'd have to have somebody on every corner."

"I'd have friends I'd have to go out and arrest if we were enforcing it."

Police Deaths Down

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nearly 20 per cent fewer law enforcement officers were killed in 1976 than the year before, according to the FBI.

"I am hopeful that the intensified examination by the law enforcement profession into the circumstances leading to these killings is producing better equipment and procedures which will further reduce them in the future," FBI Director Clarence Kelley said in a statement Sunday.

The FBI said 109 federal, state and local law enforcement officers were killed last year, 20 fewer than in 1975.

Six died in December compared to 15 in December 1975, it said in a report covering all U.S. and Puerto Rican law enforcement officers.

The FBI said 93 of the 1976 victims were killed by firearms, 65 by handguns. Thirteen victims were killed by their own service weapons, it said.

food or some type of fuel."

The U.S. Agriculture Department's Florida Emergency Board are to meet today to determine whether the recent Florida cold wave was disastrous. A favorable recommendation from the board would allow Florida Gov. Reubin Askew to ask President Carter for an emergency declaration authorizing low-cost loans and special unemployment insurance.

Up to 40 per cent of Florida's citrus crop, 75 per cent of the winter vegetable crop and 95 per cent of the ornamental plants in nurseries were wiped out in last week's five-day freeze.

Moderating temperatures brought snow and sleet to the midlands.

Four inches of snow hit parts of Kansas and Missouri Sunday.

Snow spread over the lower Ohio Valley and freezing rain covered much of the lower Mississippi Valley, the Tennessee Valley and portions of Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana today. Light snow dusted the Great Lakes and spread over the Appalachians.

Travel advisories were posted today for portions of Southern Illinois, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland for up to three inches of snow. Freezing rain prompted travel advisories for parts of Arkansas and Georgia.

The law, as it was listed under "Offenses against morals and decency" in the city code, said, "No man and woman, not married to each other, shall abide or cohabit unlawfully with each other in this city."

Pence said he didn't think the removal of the cohabitation law would have any effect on the townspeople, or the nearly 20,000 students at Kansas University.

"We weren't enforcing it anyway," he said. "I won't say I am really high on that, but I know a lot of things people do are a lot worse."

complete elimination in the future." "If we can reach an agreement with the Soviet Union for major reductions on atomic weapons, of course the next step would be to get other atomic nations to try to join in this effort, including, of course, France and England and the People's Republic of China," he said.

Carter also said the United States will try to halt the expansion of nuclear arms capability "with every means available to us" in diplomatic channels.

Wearing a blue-gray tweed suit and sipping coffee, the President sat on a sofa before a glowing fire in the fireplace and spoke with some reverence about the White House.

"It is really awe inspiring," he said, calling his tour of the Lincoln suite and the Treaty Room a "very sobering ... very gratifying experience."

"I can't say that I feel completely at ease with it yet," he said, while adding: "I feel good about it. I have enjoyed it so far ... I think I will like it very much. Good working conditions."

Carter said he intends to carry out his campaign commitments, and is "keeping a very close inventory for promises that are made."

He said he feels "quite at ease about the percentage of blacks" hired to top-level positions so far, but he acknowledged being "not completely satisfied with what we have done" in terms of hiring more women for good jobs.

"But we will try to compensate for this as we go along," he said.

Carter called his order pardoning all

Vietnam draft evaders on his first full day in office "a proper thing to do," and said, "It is one that I feel very much at ease with. It is something that should have been done. I was very grateful to be the one to do it."

On other subjects, Carter said:

— Criticism that he will yield too much to Congress is "erroneous." He said he will be "very aggressive and very adamant" in pursuing promises he made in the campaign, but believes in prior consultation with Congress to hold down the clashes where possible.

— He believes his $30 billion, two-year economic stimulus package is "a good one" and a "proper figure" for giving the ailing economy a shot in the arm.

— A peace conference on the Middle East is "very likely this year" and Vance will confer with heads of state in Israel, Egypt, Syria, Saudi Arabia and Jordan in depth on the subject. Many of the leaders will be invited to visit Carter in Washington after Vance visits them.

— If the Palestinians are invited to the conference "as agreed by the other participating nations, along with us, it would probably be as part of one of the Arab delegations. But that is something still to be decided."

— He believes "very strongly" in majority rule in Africa, "which means relinquishing the control of the government by the white minorities in the countries affected."

— U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young will go to the 14-nation African meeting in Tanzania as an observer, not as a negotiator.

— He was "well briefed" during the transition period and while he does not have all the answers as he assumes his presidency, "I haven't been disconcerted or surprised."

matter over to the university's legal department for further investigation.

FSA spokesperson Olga Diez declined comment on the report because FSA has not yet received a "final copy" of the auditors recommendations.

"As soon as we do have that report in our hands, I personally, will be making a statement," she said.

Mrs. Diez said she had received no formal indications that a lawsuit was being brought by Reeves and further denied the director's statement that FSA would be issuing him a formal letter of apology at its Feb. 1 meeting. "That's Mr. Reeves story," she said.

The auditors did recommend that the FSA reimburse the state for work performed by Reeves, not related to his duties as a state employee. The state pays one-third of his salary.

Controls over camp receipts and disbursements were inadequate, the audit report said, and purchases were not offered for competitive bidding. Further, it said, employee records were loosely kept, as were records relating to camp equipment and inventories.

Although the FSA provided more than $90,000 for camp operations for the four year period ending June 30, 1976, no records were kept to indicate the amount of usage by students or staff, the report said, in recommending registration tallies be kept.

Billy and Good Ol' Boys Booze Way Back Home

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Appearing a bit more rundown than when they arrived, Billy Carter and his friends left Washington just as they came — drinking beer.

But Sunday morning the beer was Schlitz on tap in the "Rough Rider Room" bar at National Airport, instead of his favorite Pabst. An airport guard asked him not to drink his own out in the lobby.

"He was nice about it," said Carter as he sat quietly with three or four friends. "He said it was against the law and he might get in trouble if he let me do it."

Carter, his gas station friends and several dozen folks from Plains were awaiting their plane home after four days of inauguration festivities.

"I'm ready to sleep in my own bed tonight," said one of Carter's friends, perched next to him on a bar stool.

Carter, too, was ready to go home, especially after seeing his hotel bill.

"Billy owns a piece of the hotel," said a friend.

Carter and his friends engaged in an almost constant four-day party, mostly in the privacy of his hotel suite where he could unwind with friends and family away from constant public recognition as the President's brother.

He found time to attend his brother's swearing in ceremony Thursday, visit the White House, and do a little sightseeing Saturday to view the treasures of King Tutankhamun,

Anne Hamilton Fears Life Alone

Anne Hamilton: "I'm not just George's mother."

By MARIAN CHRISTY
PALM BEACH — The interview is running late. One hour late.

Anne Hamilton, George's mother, is unavoidably delayed because she herself is conducting an interview for a prospective butler. The last butler, a double for Cary Grant and oozing charm, got himself invited as a "guest" to certain-level bashes. That made the social situation around town a little sticky. Hence Mrs. Hamilton's own necessary, time-consuming interview is delaying this one.

Now this interview is two hours late Mrs. Hamilton is having "enormous trouble" parking her Rolls Royce. Parking spaces along "busy-busy" Worth Avenue are less accessible than the big bangles in the windows of Van Cleef & Arpels.

Mrs. Hamilton, a woman of "manners," has sent several messages to chart her progress. The restaurant manager delivering the Hamilton communications shows no signs of acknowledging the absurdity of the situation.

Finally, she arrives. A perfectly groomed brunette grandmother with flashing Spanish eyes, a broad smile, black hair pulled back severely in a face-revealing bun. She is 67, "loves" feather-punctuated gowns and fox-trimmed suits. She claims that as a headstrong teenage Southern belle, she "burned in the fireplace" ballgowns similar to those of competitive peers.

"I can't stand ugliness," says Mrs. Hamilton who freely admits she has had several "nips and tucks" done on her remarkably attractive face. "I like drama in my clothes. When I walk into a room, it's like walking onstage. I like making entrances. I didn't have the talent or drive to be a successful actress. I've never had any wild drives."

Anne Hamilton, nee Stebens, a doctor's daughter born in Kentucky and raised in Arkansas, has been married four times. She is "quite willing" to chance a fifth marriage. "The libbers are giving all their privileges away," she sniffs. "Men take care of women. Women are ruining things for themselves." Mrs. Hamilton, who lives in an eight-bedroom mansion here, is generally known as Anne Hamilton — except when she wants to make a point.

"My real name," she says with unabashed delight about a string of impressive married names, "is Anne Potter Hamilton Hunt Spalding."

"I had four marriages but I've only been married nine years out of my whole life." She sighs. "And now I know what loneliness is."

The actor, George Hamilton, 37, is her middle son Bill, 45, the eldest, is a real estate broker. David, 36, is an advertising executive married to the granddaughter of the late opera star, Lauritz Melchior. "I like the good points in all of my sons and don't like the bad points in all of them," she says. "I see their faults clearly."

She is very frank about George.

"He has never quite made it, has he? But, really, I think he's beginning to come back into style. The world-at-large now is bored with hippies. After all, George is beautiful and he's managing to do well."

"George tells me everything," she confides. "My other sons don't tell me much. George discussed the details of his first affair with me and all his affairs since. If he really gets into a problem, he calls me. But he talks fast — as if he is double-parked."

She thinks "it's best" that George and his wife of four years, Alana, are separated.

rated. They have a 2-year-old son, Ashley, in Alana's custody.

The Palm Beach social life is riddled with difficulties if you're what she calls "The Extra Woman." "When you're a single woman in a small, posh community," she huffs, "the hostesses don't bother with you. They greet with you a sweet hello and that's the extent of the friendship. I'd rather go back to New York. There's more freedom there. Two women can go into a lounge and not be suspect."

Mrs. Hamilton looks at marriage as the "ultimate, complex give-and-take situation" which she says she has not mastered.

"With one of my husbands, I said I'd rub his back if he'd rub mine. Then we got into a terrible argument about whose back would be rubbed last. We simply couldn't agree on the terms."

Insecurities about her singleness run deeply.

"I have this awful dream," she reveals. "I lie on the floor and cry because I've ended up with nobody. The dream must be a symbol of the way I really feel. But I never let it out — except in a dream."

Not long ago, Mrs. Hamilton, a practicing Christian Scientist, had a heart attack. She says a practitioner in California helped to "heal" her. "I've been much, much better since the healing began," she insists. "Other people who have had my problem would have been in an intensive care unit." She believes God doesn't recognize pain which, to quote her, "can be prayed away."

"When George was a boy, a car door was slammed on his finger. He screamed in pain. I calmly prayed over him. He never even lost a fingernail. In fact, in half an hour, he was happily licking an ice cream cone."

The problem Anne Hamilton has frequently coped with is "jealousy" from other women.

"A lot of women loathe me," she says. "They accuse me of walking with my head in the air. I'm near-sighted. Sometimes I don't even see them. Some women ask me if I've ever changed a diaper. I tell them I've done everything."

What she needs now is a man who can manage her life and, specifically, her household.

"People on your staff can be very temperamental," she says. "But you, the lady of the house, must be sweet and lovely and always say darling-this, darling-that. It's all very difficult without a man. I've never married for money. But once I married for security."

Anne Hamilton doesn't want to be known as George's mother. "Everyone knows me," she says. "I've talked to George about this identification problem. George says he's going to write a book and title it 'Everyone Knows My Mother.'"

Special Program

SHANDAKEN—For the final meeting of Phase I of the Bicentennial to be held Tuesday, Jan. 25, 8 p.m. in the Town Hall, the commission is planning a program called "Our Bicentennial in Review."

Area residents are invited to loan their best photos for display and slides to be projected and arrangements may be made with Ida Tollenger, Richard Knight or William Caton.

A feature of the evening will be an autograph party. Those attending are asked to bring their Bicentennial Booklets to be autographed by the authors, staff and contributors. Additional books will be available.

The agenda includes a report of the year's activities prepared for the archives of the town board and a presentation by the Woodland Valley Community Association of the names of all who rang the bell for freedom. A progress report will be made on markers for historic sites.

A short business meeting will establish a new commission for Phase II of the Bicentennial activities in 1977. Nominations, suggestions and voluntary offer of service will be appreciated.

Robert Steuding

UCCC Prof Authors Book On Pulitzer Prize-winner

STONE RIDGE—Robert Steuding, an associate professor of English at Ulster County Community College, is the author of a book on Pulitzer Prize-winning poet, Gary Snyder, which has just been published. Entitled "Gary Snyder" the book has been reviewed in the "Library Journal" by Laura M. Zaidman, an English professor at South Georgia College who calls it "well organized" and recommends it to readers.

Professor Zaidman reports that this is the first full-length study of Snyder and explains that the reader "is compelled to get involved in Snyder's visionary poet-ashaman role, and in the magical power and beauty of his language." "Indeed," she continues, "prophetic analogies to Whitman may prove to be valid."

Influenced by Beat writers Kerouac and Ginsberg, Snyder blends Zen Buddhism and Oriental and American Indian mythology in his art, according to Professor Zaidman. "Steuding's perceptive portrait of this conscious myth-maker and meticulous craftsman—transcending the image of the hip sub-culture's guru—is recommended," she adds.

In his book, Professor Steuding touches on the development of Snyder's poetic style from the crafted poem he composed in the 1950's to the more visionary poetry he now is composing.

A resident of Olivebridge, Steuding has been a member of the Ulster County Community College faculty since 1969. He formerly taught at the University of Southern California, the Chinese University of Hong Kong, and Michigan State University. Since 1972 he has been an adjunct professor in the Union Graduate School in Antioch College.

He is a poet, lecturer on

Catskill life and love, and hiker and has taken students out to hike the Catskills as part of credit-free courses on "Hiking the Catskills." He earned his Master's Degree from the University of Southern California, has written numerous articles and is doing research on the building of the Ashokan Reservoir for an historical novel. He has written numerous poems concerning the Catskill Mountains.

'Train Fantasy' Set for New Paltz

NEW PALTZ—Looking at trains and stations through eyes of an artist Joel Levenson has arranged "Train Fantasy," a photographic collection of views, ("some semi-realism, always recognizable") for exhibition at the new London Gallery, 286 Rt. 32, South, New Paltz.

Levenson, who resides in Ulster Park, is a graduate student at State University College, New Paltz, where he is a candidate for his Masters degree in Fine Arts. In fact, the exhibition is his thesis for the degree. He graduated from New Paltz several years ago with a BS in Science and taught general science in junior high schools in Spring Valley and Yonkers for about five years. His interest was in photography and he always planned to return to school for further study.

At New Paltz he has studied with John Seaholm and Peter Correia. He does some free-lance work and hopes to teach on the university level.

His photographs are one of the first exhibits at the London Gallery and he is assisting Linda and Don Lubov with their gallery project. Linda also does photography and Don paints, draws and does some architectural work. He has taught on the university level.

The "Train Fantasy" exhibition will be at London Gallery Feb. 12 through 27 with opening reception Saturday, Feb. 12, 2 to 4 p.m. The gallery hours are noon to 5 p.m. daily.

Film Presentation This Wednesday

HUDSON—"A Leaf from the Town Record," a new 30-minute film by Hudson area film maker, Jack Ofield and Bowling Green Films, Inc., will be shown at a free public screening at Columbia-Greene Community College, Jan. 26, 7:30 p.m.

Filming took place over a one-year period in the city of Hudson. Using the city's Bicentennial parade as its central motif, the film examines how loyalty is taught and reinforced by community groups and institutions beginning in pre-kindergarten and continuing through high school into adulthood. The process is traced through posters and essays prepared by children for Americanism contests, recitations of patriotic poems and the Pledge of Allegiance and the singing of patriotic songs

Juxtaposed against the parade footage and views on loyalty are the harsher aspects of unemployment, economic struggle and disenfranchisement. Interviews on these and other subjects feature community leaders and individual residents of Hudson. A portrait emerges of a typical American community in a state of flux.

The film was produced in cooperation with the New York State Council on the Humanities, the Institute on Man and Science, and WMHT-TV and is part of a series created by Jack Ofield.

Following the screening a discussion between audience and a panel will take place. The college is located one mile east of the Rip Van Winkle Bridge, Rt. 23.

DEAR ABBY

Man-to-Man Talk's in Order

DEAR ABBY: As many others have said, I never thought I'd be writing a letter to Dear Abby, but I must confess, I don't know where to turn.

Our 17-year-old son has become interested in a girl. We've always wanted him to have girlfriends, but this one might not be good for him. A week ago Saturday, on their first date, they went to a movie. (We let him use the family car.) He came home at 7:45 Sunday morning.

He said that after the movie, he went to her house to watch television and they both fell asleep. Last Saturday night he went out at 7 p.m. and came home at 4:30 Sunday morning.

Wouldn't you say that something is drastically wrong with a mother who would allow a 15-year-old girl to keep such hours?

Any advice his father and I give him causes nothing but back talk. We've always had a good relationship with our son until now. What do you suggest? WORRIED.

DEAR WORRIED: I suggest that his father have a man-to-man talk with the boy. Of course the girl's parents should place some restrictions on her with regard to the hours she keeps, but since they do not (or she ignores them), it's up to you to put some on your son. Tell him what time you want him home, and if he doesn't comply, the key to the situation is the one that fits the car.

DEAR ABBY: I would like your opinion of the following situation:

When friends just drop in, should the hostess excuse herself and put on a pot of coffee, or get a cold drink and serve it with a sandwich, cake, cookies, or whatever she has on hand? Or should she ask her guests if they would like a hot drink, a cold one or a sandwich?

My husband and I are on opposite sides of this argument and need you to settle it for us. —MILLIE IN MARYLAND.

DEAR MILLIE: The gracious hostess does not inquire. She acts. (P. S. Drop-in visitors should not expect a feed-in.)

DEAR ABBY: For the last 12 years I have gone to the same hairdresser once a week for a shampoo and set. It now costs $6 plus a dollar tip and the cost of parking.

Every Christmas I have given my hairdresser a lovely gift, carefully chosen—something I would like to receive myself.

It just occurred to me, Abby, that inasmuch as I tip my hairdresser every week, SHE (or the owner) should be giving ME a small present at Christmas in appreciation of my business.

Next year should I ask, "Which would you prefer, a tip every week or a nice Christmas present?"

I would appreciate your opinion and those of your readers and hairdressers. —TIRE OF GIVING.

DEAR TIRE: Don't ask. Those who perform personal services NEED tips, but feeling as you do, skip the Christmas gift.

ERMA BOMBECK

That Dress May Be Weird But It's Her Xanadu...

Mayva's a real winner. The other night she said, "You know that blue dress you bought a few years ago that was two sizes too small that you were going to diet down to? Well, I saw it the other night on the mother on Happy Days."

"What's that supposed to mean?" I asked.

"It means that dress has been in and out of style five times since you bought it."

"I didn't want to mention it," I said lowering my voice, "but there's something weird about that dress."

"Like what?"

"You'll think I'm crazy."

"Trust me."

"Okay, the truth is that dress is shriveling."

"You're crazy."

"I knew you'd say that. You didn't believe me when I had that fake fur coat that grew in the closet every summer."

"That was different," said Mayva.

"No it wasn't. You saw me hem it every single October. I put it away knee-length, but when I got it out again, it was always back to my ankles."

"I've never heard of a dress shriveling before."

"I didn't say 'shriveling,' I said 'shriveling.' There's a difference. You know how I've been watching my weight. How many pounds would you say I've lost since I bought this dress?"

Mayva thought a moment. "Three hundred and seventy-two."

"Whatever. Well, I get the dress out every year and try it on. I tell you it's getting smaller."

"Can you wear it at all?" asked Mayva.

"Of course I can wear it. From one angle I actually look like Joey Heatherton."

"What angle is that?"

"Flat on my back with my arms outstretched."

"Look! Why don't you just get rid of the dress? You can't wear it and you're not going to you just have to face up to that."

I jerked it out of her hand.

"This dress is my Xanadu, my

Miss America, my Pillsbury bake-off, my Academy Award,

my Reader's Digest

Sweepstakes — don't you understand, Mayva, it's my dream!"

"You know something? Mrs.

Walton was wearing that same

Mayva's cruel.

Benefit Concert Planned For the Arts Community

NEW PALTZ—The second annual benefit concert for the Arts Community will be held Friday, Jan. 28, 7:30 p.m., at McKenna Theater on the campus of SUNY, New Paltz.

Since the Arts Community is a non-profit organization, all monies realized from the concert will be used for scholarships and operating expenses. Members of the faculty of the Arts Community are currently in rehearsal for this event, which promises to be a unique evening of music, dance and drama. Last year's concert was very well received and supported by area residents—a success both artistically and financially.

In performance this year will be Dorothy Anderson, Bonnie MacLeod, Deborah Vinton, Polly Wingeyer and Carol Premezzi. At the same time, art works by Arts Community faculty—Natalie Minewski, Jim Krieger and other professional artists—will be exhibited in the lobby of the theater.

Tickets for this much anticipated performance are available at The Handmade Shop, N. Front St., New Paltz, or from students and faculty of the Arts Community.

The Arts Community is presently between sessions. However, several teachers are giving instruction during the inter-session in order to maintain a continuous program. Spring Session begins on Feb. 26; catalogs will be available the end of January. Upon the completion of a successful Fall Session and a very artistic and enjoyable Holiday Festival, the Arts Community is looking forward to the Spring Session with the continuance of many courses for young people as well as the introduction of some new classes and instructors.

Birth Reported

MANHASSET—A daughter, Mindy Alison, was born Jan. 10 to Mr. and Mrs. Jay P. Port, 69 Edgeworth St., Valley Stream, at North Shore University Hospital. The mother is the former Rona R. Cohen, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Bernard Cohen, 450 Albany Ave., Kingston.

Piano Music Program At Vassar College

POUGHKEEPSIE—Todd W. Crow, lecturer in music at Vassar College, will present a concert of piano music Wednesday, Jan. 26, at the college's Skinner Recital Hall. The program, to begin at 8:30 p.m., is open to the public without charge.

The program will include Schubert's "Wanderer Fantasy," a Chopin group including the "Polonaise-Fantasia," and works by Beethoven and Mozart.

Crow, a native of Santa Barbara, Calif., studied at the University of California, the Music Academy of the West, and at the Juilliard School in New York. He has presented many concerts in this country and abroad, and at a recent recital in London, a critic for the Daily Telegraph cited Crow's "large, full-bodied piano tone, with his secure command of virtuoso display." He has been on the faculty of Vassar's Department of Music since 1969.

A little cold weather isn't going to stop those hearty Ulster County sportsmen eager to make the fishing season a year-round proposition. In fact, the cold has been just what the doctor ordered for ice fishermen, as they photos reflect. A Dream Come True for Watson

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — It's been a long time between victories for Tom Watson, but when he finally snapped his losing streak it was in the tournament he wanted to win more than any other — The Crosby National Pro-Am.

Ever since Watson, now 27, was a student at Stanford University, which is about 80 miles up the freeway on the way to San Francisco, used to sneak his way onto Pebble Beach, there wasn't any tournament he has wanted to win any more than the Crosby.

Sunday, it all came to pass for the likeable native of Kansas City, but he had to survive a few anxious moments over the final three holes to nail down a one-stroke victory over Tony Jacklin, the good-guy Englishman who is determined to make his way once again on the American Tour.

"This is like a dream come true for me," Watson said of his Crosby victory. "I can remember those days at Stanford when they use to let me play here on Saturday mornings before anyone else had teed off.

"I used to get up at 4:30, drive the 80 miles or so down here and hope they would let me play at seven," he said. "After I finished a round, I would hang around until late afternoon — the later for a par — on the final hole."

Thus, even though Watson got into trouble on the 16th when he pulled his tee shot and again on the 18th when he first missed the fairway on his second and again when score of 273 was a tournament record, and he attributed his fine play to excellent weather.

"I can't remember the weather being any better than it was this last week," said Watson. "I recall coming down here in the summer and playing in the wind and mist. But it's my favorite course and I never miss a chance to play Pebble Beach."

Watson finished fourth at Tucson last week and came here with the idea of having a good time and letting his game take care of itself. He still felt that way after taking a one-stroke lead in the third round.

"I figured if I could shoot 71 I would win the tournament," he said later. "It turned out exactly that way. Even though I had some problems, I never became upset at myself. If I hadn't won I wouldn't feel any different. It's been a great week and a great Crosby, so who can complain."

noon, and after everyone else was finished, I'd go around again. You can imagine the special feeling I have for Pebble Beach and the Crosby."

Victory didn't come easy Sunday, though. Watson opened up a two-shot lead on Jacklin but lost one stroke when he bunkered his third shot on the par five, 555-yard 14th and then two-putted from 15 feet. Still, he seemed in good shape, mostly because Jacklin was having trouble making putts of 10 feet on the 16th and 17th and one of five he failed to sink a 10 foot putt, he had enough of a lead to survive.

As it was, both Jacklin and Watson bogied the final hole but with the earlier cushion, Watson was able to win the $40,000 top prize by a stroke.

Despite his erratic finish, Jacklin was pleased with his play. Maybe he should be because it's been a long time — four years to be exact — since Jacklin has won a sizeable check in America.

He finished at 274, 13 under par, and won $22,900. Watson's 72-hole

Arbour Credits His Goaltender

DENVER (UPI) — Coach Al Arbour of the New York Islanders gave goaltender Bill Smith the credit for his team's 7-1 win Sunday night over the Colorado Rockies.

"Smitty kept us in the game the first two periods," said Arbour. "We didn't play well as a team at all, but we capitalized on our chances around the net. We could have been bombed in the first couple of periods if it wasn't for Smith."

Smith turned away 24 Colorado shots in the first two periods and allowed only one score by Colorado's Dennis Croteau with 7:21 gone in the game. Colorado outshot New York 32-29 overall.

New York went ahead 2-0 in the first three minutes on quick goals by Garry Howatt and Andre St. Laurent. The Islanders scored twice in the second period and three times in the final 15 minutes.

Jean Potvin scored 9:54 into the third period, his first goal since mid-November. The other Islander goals were scored by Bert Marshall, Ed Westfall, Bryan Trottier and Denis Potvin.

Arbour said he played four separate lines during the game and at one point made shifts every 45 seconds, afraid that his players would tire quickly because of Denver's mile-high altitude.

He also credited Smith's performance with generating enthusiasm on the Islander bench, which still felt some dejection at their 3-2 loss to Pittsburgh Saturday.

"We were very disappointed after that game," Arbour said. But by the last period, Arbour said the Islanders' spirit was "better than it's been all year."

Colorado coach Johnny Wilson called his team's loss "dreadful" and "embarrassing." Wilson said the club played fairly well "until the end of the second period when we couldn't score. That made a difference. New York bounced the puck around and everybody (on the Rockies) panicked and chased it."

Wilson said Colorado was hurt by the absence of center Paul Gardner, sidelined with a knee injury suffered Friday.

Gardner's 1.17 points per game average is among the best for National Hockey League rookies this season.

Caps 6, Blues 3

The Washington Capitals, doing what they used to do best, spent 55 minutes making the St. Louis Blues overconfident. Then the Caps lowered the boom with four quick goals for a 6-3 victory Sunday.

"It did look like it was a planned attack to put them (St. Louis) to sleep for 55 minutes," said Washington Coach Tom McVie. "But a lot of guys who didn't do anything right all game came alive in the last five minutes."

St. Louis coach Emile Francis said, "That's what you call an explosion. We worked so hard for it and then we lose it."

The visiting Blues held a 3-2 lead with less than four minutes left in the game, when Bill Riley started the fireworks for the Capitals.

Riley has received more attention than most rookies in the National Hockey League because he is black. But his play is beginning to prove noteworthy. After a 10-game trial, the 26-year-old right wing was signed by the Capitals and has accounted for six points in three game since then.

Riley's goal with 3:18 to play tied the game, 3-3.

In the WHA, New England edged Cincinnati 4-3, Birmingham defeated Indianapolis 6-2, Winnipeg outscored Calgary 10-5, Houston beat San Diego 5-3 and Edmonton defeated Phoenix 9-2.

Bruins 3, Flames 0

John Bucyk and Bob Schamutz each scored a goal and an assist and Gerry Cheevers stopped 14 shots in leading Boston to an easy victory over Atlanta.

Canadiens 2, Red Wings 2

Yvan Cournoyer scored a power-play goal at 14:20 of the final period to give Montreal a tie with Detroit after Dennis Polonich had given the Red Wings a 2-1 lead.

Barons 3, Sabres 0

Gary Edwards, acquired Friday from Los Angeles, stopped 27 shots in leading Cleveland past Buffalo. Bob Girard scored the Barons' first goal and Mike Fidler added an insurance score in the second period.

Canucks 6, Rangers 2

Flyers 2, Black Hawks 2

Jim Watson scored the tying goal for Philadelphia after Chicago had taken the lead on goals by John Marks and Kirk Bowman. Reggie Leach scored the Flyers' first goal.

Maple Leafs 5, North Stars 2

Third-period goals by Errol Thompson, Ian Turnbull and Jack Valiquette gave Toronto a victory over Minnesota.

Bubbles Washes Away Nets' Troubles

NEW YORK (UPI)—The New York Nets turned on the "Bubble Machine" Sunday and washed away their troubles.

Led by reserve guard Bubbles Hawkins, the Nets finally snapped their losing streak at 13 games by whipping the Chicago Bulls, 95-86.

Hawkins, who joined the team as a free agent at the start of the losing streak, came off the bench to score 24 points, including 18 in the second quarter, as the Nets sent the Bulls reeling to their 19th loss in 23 road games.

"I was intent on playing a good game today," said Hawkins, who had three assists and three steals to go with his game-high point total. "I felt confident. I knew if I could get time to play I could do well. Everybody was intense. We were intent on winning. It was the first time I had my adrenalin really flowing since I came here."

Hawkins hit on 7-of-7 field goal attempts in the second quarter as the Nets raced from a nine-point first quarter deficit to an 11-point half-time lead. Then, in the last quarter, when the Bulls had drawn to within four points with 3:33 to play, Hawkins put the Nets comfortably in front by hitting a three-point play then stealing the ball and feeding Tim Bassett for an easy basket.

Nets' coach Kevin Loughery felt the team's defense against the Bulls' 7-foot-2 center Artis Gilmore also was a decisive factor in the victory. With the Nets double-teaming him throughout the game, Gilmore took only eight shots and scored 15 points.

"Our game plan is always to try and stop certain individuals and today it was to contain Gilmore," said Loughery. "We double-teamed Artis the whole way. We figured if we were gonna get beat, we were gonna get beat with jump shots, not layups. I'm tremendously relieved that the losing streak is over. Our guys have been playing hard right along and we knew we'd get something going soon."

In other games, Philadelphia topped Boston 91-83, Golden State defeated Atlanta 104-97, New Orleans dined the New York Knicks 111-102, San Antonio topped Portland 123-118, Phoenix beat Seattle 98-88, Washington defeated Detroit 119-108, Milwaukee tripped Kansas City 119-111 and Los Angeles routed Indiana 121-104.

76ers 91, Celtics 83

George McGinnis scored nine of his 13 points in the last period to spark Philadelphia to its second victory over the Celtics in 18 hours. Julius Erving led the 76ers with 19 points as the 76ers increased their lead over Boston to seven games in the Atlantic Division.

Warriors 104, Hawks 97

Phil Smith scored nine points in the final six minutes of play to give Golden State a victory over Atlanta. John Drew scored 42 points for the Hawks, but the Warriors offset them with three players scoring better than 20 points. Jamaal Wilkes had 24, Rick Barry 22 and Smith 21 for the Warriors.

Jazz 111, Knicks 102

Pete Maravich scored 38 points, including 11 in the fourth quarter, as New Orleans posted its third victory in a row and handed New York its third straight loss. Bob McAdoo paced the Knicks with 36 points and 19 rebounds.

Spurs 123, Trailblazers 118

George Gervin scored a season-high 41 points and San Antonio held off several Portland rallies to defeat the Trailblazers. Gervin hit on six straight field goals before missing in the first half then came back to hit all eight of his shots in the second half. Bill Walton topped Portland with 28 points.

Suns 98, Sonics 88

Ricky Sobers scored 11 of his 12 points during a five-minute span in the fourth quarter to propel Phoenix to its victory over Seattle. Paul Westphal led the Suns with 24 points, while Alvan Adams added 18 and Curtis Perry 17.

Bullets 119, Pistons 108

Elvin Hayes scored 30 points and Phil Chenier added 23 as Washington beat Detroit for its fifth straight triumph and 11th in 13 games. Hayes scored 12 of his points in the third quarter when the Bullets opened up an 18 point lead.

Bucks 119, Kings 111

Junior Bridgeman scored 27 points and Fred Carter 24 in helping Milwaukee snap a six-game losing streak by defeating Kansas City. The Bucks scored 15 straight points, five of them by Brian Winters, midway through the first quarter to take a 27-8 lead and the closest the Kings could come after that was seven points.

Lakers 121, Pacers 104

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 25 points and rookie Earl Tatum added 20 points, a career high, 20 to lead Los Angeles to its 17th win in the last 21 games and into first place in the Pacific Division with a victory over Indiana.

Borg Had Some Ideas of His Own

BOCA RATON, Fla. (UPI) — Bjorn Borg is a hard young man to convince.

He had just let Jimmy Connors escape three match points, win three straight games and even the sets at one apiece.

Almost everyone of the 5,000 spectators who had paid $15 and $20 to watch the match, figured Connors was well on his way to his eighth straight win over Borg.

But the 20-year-old Swede had his own idea.

"I knew if I could take the third game in the third set, I would beat him. But I had to win that game," he said later.

Borg had the serve and didn't waste any time, winning in four straight points. Both held serve in the next two games, before Borg broke Connors' serve to make it 3-1. Connors broke back immediately, and Borg followed suit. All he had to do from then on was hold his serve.

The final score read 6-4, 5-7, 6-3, as Borg beat Connors for only the second time in his career and collected the $100,000 first prize in the Grand Slam of Tennis Tournament Sunday.

Borg said he had several ideas on how to beat Connors, and most of them worked. He mixed his shots and speed more than he usually does and preyed on what he thinks is a Connors weakness — his forehand as he approaches the net.

"When I hit the soft shot to the forehand, when he hits his approach shot he makes errors," Borg said.

"The way to play him is to hit high ones and low ones. If I hit them all with top spin, he likes it," Borg added.

Most of the match's drama came in the 10th game of the second set, with Connors serving and trailing 4-5.

Borg worked the score to 15-40 with a backhand passing shot for double match point.

Connors escaped the first time, when Borg was wide with a backhand. But the score was still 30-40.

This time, Connors charged the net and the shot hit the tape and bounced over. Borg got to the ball, but couldn't get it over the net. Connors stalked away shaking his finger.

Borg got the advantage on the next point, but this time he netted a backhand, giving Connors new life, if only for a while.

Connors played the entire match in his usual aggressive style, moving to the net at every possible opportunity. But Borg chose to stay back along the baseline and use his exceptional ground strokes to make as many returns as possible.

"It's usually hard to come to the net against Jimmy — he has such good depth," Borg said.

Borg said he may have been too eager in his victory over Adriano Panatta in the semifinals of the four-man event Saturday.

"I made too many errors, but I made up my mind Jimmy would make most of the errors today," he said.

Connors won $50,000 for second place and Manuel Orantes collected $30,000 for third place, which he won with his 6-7, 6-2, 6-2 defeat of Panatta in the consolation match.

Two Men to Replace One

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Dick Syzmanski, the Baltimore Colts' director of pro personnel, and Ernie Accorsi, a former team publicity director, have been picked by owner Robert Irsay to replace fired General Manager Joe Thomas.

Syzmanski, who has been with the club 22 years as a player, assistant coach and executive, is due to be named general manager Tuesday, with Accorsi his administrative assistant.

Accorsi, Syzmanski and former Colt quarterback John Unitas were mentioned as possible successors when Thomas was dismissed Thursday night with a year remaining on his $125,000 a year contract. Thomas, who was seeking a five-year pact at nearly three times the salary, predicted Unitas would get the job.

Syzmanski was drafted out of Notre Dame in 1955 and played center and linebacker before moving into the front office after the Colts lost the Super Bowl to the New York Jets on Jan. 12, 1969. He was named director of pro personnel in 1974, the year he spent a season as the club's offensive line coach.

Accorsi, currently an assistant to National Football Conference President George Halas, directed the Colts' publicity operations before moving to the league office in New York.

Rare UCLA Win At Notre Dame

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI)—Since when does UCLA win at Notre Dame?

The 10th-ranked Bruins, who last won here in 1973, settled matters Sunday with a 70-65 victory in a topsy-turvy nationally-televised game.

"First Notre Dame had the momentum, then we had it," UCLA Coach Gene Bartow said. "And we kept it in the second half for a while. Then they got it and we were fortunate to get it back in the last two minutes."

The lead changed hands 15 times but it was not until UCLA's Marques Johnson scored a go-ahead field goal with 90 seconds remaining that the Bruins were assured of the victory which lifted their season record to 14-2.

Johnson finished with 21 points to lead all scorers before a sellout crowd of 11,345. The loss was the fifth in the last six games for Notre Dame, whose record now stands at 8-5.

In the first half, UCLA led the Irish by 12 after the score had been tied nine times in the opening 20 minutes. However, in the first seven minutes of the second half, the Bruins appeared to put a lock on things with a 12-2 scoring spree.

But Notre Dame then reeled off 12 straight points and took the lead with 5:17 to go on a basket by Duck Williams, who topped the Irish with 19 points.

Williams hit two more field goals in the next two minutes and Billy Paterno connected on eight straight free throws to help the Irish to a 63-60 lead. But Johnson hit from close range and then, tipping the ball to teammate Roy Hamilton on a jump ball, scored to make it 64-63 for the Bruins.

"I thought the game would be decided on the boards," Bartow said. "They won the boards for 30 minutes and we won them enough to win." Notre Dame outrebounded the Bruins 48-29.

"We've lost six games since I've been at UCLA," he added. "Two to Notre Dame, two to Indiana and two to Oregon, all very physical teams."

Elsewhere during weekend play, second-rated North Carolina rebounded from an early-week, 75-73 loss to North Carolina State and edged past No. 18 Maryland 71-68. Phil Ford scored 19 points, including a three-point play and two key free throws in the final 3½ minutes, to give the Tar Heels a 5-1 Atlantic Coast Conference record and 13-2 overall and hand the Terps their second loss in a row.

No. 3-ranked Cincinnati, after losing their first game of the season earlier this week, dropped another — this time to Tulane, 78-75, and fell to 12-2. Green Wave guard Pierre Gaudin led all scorers with 20.

Phil Hubbard scored a career-high 29 points to spark fifth-rated Michigan to a 66-61 victory over Illinois, a 6-0 Big Ten record and 13-1 overall mark.

Eddie Owens led five Nevada-Las Vegas players in double figures with 20 points as the sixth-ranked Rebels defeated Pepperdine 85-80 to extend their winning streak at home to 54 games, longest in the nation.

Mike Phillips scored a season-high 24 points and grabbed 19 rebounds to lead No. 7 Kentucky, 12-2 overall and 5-1 in the SEC, to an 87-72 victory over LSU.

Bo Ellis and Butch Lee scored 17 points apiece in eighth-ranked Marquette's 85-43 romp over Xavier, the Warriors' ninth straight victory.

Rod Griffin hit his first 11 shots from the field and finished with a game-high 29 points to lead ninth-ranked Wake Forest, 14-2, past North Carolina-Charlotte 74-72.

No. 1 San Francisco, 19-0, was idle.

Elsewhere in the Top 20, No. 12th Purdue beat Michigan State 76-70, No. 13 Minnesota dumped Wisconsin 82-64, No. 14 Arizona routed Brigham Young 113-85, No. 15 Arkansas whipped Texas 86-58, No. 16 Louisville blasted St. Louis 74-55, No. 17 Providence thrashed Boston University 83-56, No. 19 Memphis State took Brandeis 97-87 and No. 20 Utah defeated Arizona State 77-66.

Roundup: Reutemann 1st; Stenmark Takes Slalom

Carlos Reutemann of Argentina survived the inferno-like heat and risky road conditions Sunday to win the 1977 Brazilian Formula One automobile Grand Prix. Reutemann, in a Ferrari, was followed by James Hunt of Great Britain, in a McLaren and Niki Lauda of Austria, in a Ferrari.

Sweden's Ingemar Stenmark against outskied all his rivals in the slalom during Sunday's World Cup competition.

Martina Navratilova, won her second tournament in three weeks when she downed Sue Barker, 7-6, 7-5, in the finals of the Virginia Slims event in Houston.

Brian Gottfried says he wants to be the best tennis player in the world and he appears to have moved a notch closer to that goal. Presently ranked 11th among his peers, Gottfried beat sixth-ranked Guillermo Vilas in the Baltimore International Indoor Tennis Championships finals Sunday. Vilas, who lost the title match, 6-3, 7-6, plus the $20,000 first place prize, agreed that Gottfried is definitely among the top 10 players in the world.

Bernard "Toots" Shor, a well-known restaurateur who was one of New York's most enthusiastic sports fans, died Sunday in New York University Medical Center after a brief illness. He was 71. A hospital spokesman gave the time of Shor's death as 11:58 p.m. The cause of death was not revealed at the request of his family.

Armando Muniz, a 29-year-old slugger who's taken a lot of punches, insisted he was still in shape to continue against welterweight champion Carlos Palomino Saturday night when the referee stopped the bout. Palomino, 26, in his first defense of the World Boxing Council title, was declared the winner by a knockout at 2:24 of the 15th round before a crowd of 9,028 at Olympic Auditorium.

Gordon Banks, one of the great goalkeepers in English soccer history, will come out of retirement to play with the Fort Lauderdale Strikers of the North American Soccer League.

Marlon Post of Averill Park, N.Y., placed third in the serial competition Sunday to win the $65,000 Colgate World Trophy for women freestyle skiers.

Rangers, Colonials, Lions Hurley Hockey Leaders

HURLEY—The Rangers, Colonials and Hurley Lions stayed atop their respective divisions and the Sabres and Rangers tied in the Seniors division as a result of games in the Hurley Hockey League.

The Rangers head the Mite division (ages 6-8) with six points, followed by the Bruins and Wings with four each. The Bruins edged the Rangers, 2-1, with Gary Moody and Eric Hurley scoring for the winners and Gret Shuck for the Rangers, in one contest, and the Rangers topped the Wings, 3-2. Rangers goals were by Glen Healey (two) and Lief Lohseide, while Jim Hobart hit a pair for the Wings.

The Colonials sit atop the Pee Wee division (9-11) with nine points. Kingston Travel and Lamoreaux Mobil have seven each and Air Power has five. In Pee Wee games, the Colonials (Mike Ryan three goals, Kelley Ryan one) topped Kingston Travel (Chris Burns), 4-1; Air Power (Kevin Madonna) drew with Lamoreaux Mobil (John Fisher); the Colonials (Kelley Ryan) tied with Air Power (Mark Clogston); Kingston Travel (Mike Oliver and Matthew Couris) edged Lamoreaux Mobil (Brian Davis), 2-1; with KT goalie Richard Scheinadake doing an outstanding job; and the Colonials (Sean Matthews, Mike Ryan) were in a 2-2 tie with Lamoreaux Mobil (Brian Davis two).

The Hurley Lions have 12 points to lead the juniors (12-15), with Paley's Market (seven) and Kelder's Grocery (three) following. The Lions (Steve Rossi, Jeff Hoffstatter, Todd Hoffstatter) beat Kelder's (Shawn Hughes), 3-1; Paley's (Dave Carr four, Del DeAngelis two) crushed the Lions (Todd Hoffstatter two), 6-2; Kelder's (Glen Hoffstatter, Jeff Merchant) edged Paley's (Del DeAngelis), 2-1; and the Lions (Todd and Jeff Hoffstatter and Paul North) edged Kelder's (Glen Hoffstatter and Shawn Hughes), 3-2, in overtime. The Lions' Rick Locicento turned in some outstanding defense in play.

The Sabres and Rangers, the only teams in the seniors division (15-18), are tied with 2-2 records and four points each after the Sabres took a pair. First, they won, 3-2, as John Markes, Alex Leskov and Tom Pangburn scored for the Sabres and Jim Kerr and Rick Hoffstatter for the Rangers, then the Sabres triumphed, 5-2, as Kevin McLain (two), Tony DeStefano, John Markes and Tom Pangburn scored for the winners and Jim Kerr and Richard Ruth for the Rangers. Goalsies Scott Espie (Sabres) and Dick Hoffstatter (Rangers) did some fine work in that overtime game.

Mary Kennelly's 652 Is New No. 2 Triple

KINGSTON — The Bow Tie Major got itself a new top triple last week, and that game-winning 652 bowled by Mary Kennelly also moved her into the second position on the Women's Top Ten list for the season.

Kennelly slugged 227 and 245 along the way and thereby earned a tie for the fifth best women's solo of the season as well.

Dev Fundino was the runner-up at 525, and Arlene Wilson, who's currently in tenth place in the triple derby, cracked 522.

In the International League meanwhile, an individual race has developed to go along with the tight team race for first place. Bob (T) Smith, the runaway leader in the high average competition last season, suddenly has a bare two-pin lead on Bud Lowe.

Lowe has been the hottest bowler in the loop over the last nine weeks, a span in which he's logged a 700, the No. 6 triple, and six consecutive 600's. He's currently behind only Smith with a 198.35 average. Smith still paces the pack at 200.49.

A steady performer over the years, Lowe added a 607 to his list in his most recent outing. Val Pelham, with a 252-457 led the week's action.

There were also some highlights in the Friday Night Hustlers. John Pike, who led the meet with a 613, cracked 238 to set a league standard in the singles department.

It was Pike's career first 600, and the runnerup, Bill Franklin, broke the same barrier with a 591 effort. Ed Simeon recorded a 137 triplete, and Mike picked up his second century award of the season via his 155 average.

Elks and Friends of New Paltz and Highland

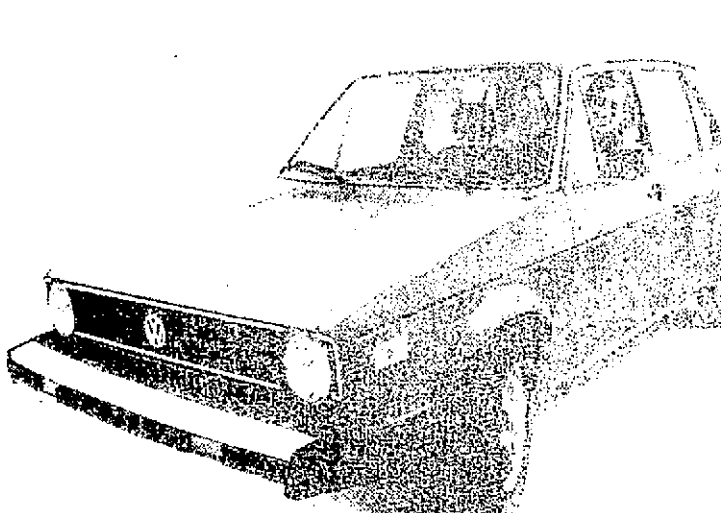

The second meeting of the proposed New Paltz Lodge of Elks will be held on Tuesday Jan. 25, 1977 at "My Fathers Place Restaurant, Old Rd. 259, New Paltz, N.Y. at 8 p.m.

The local organizing committee will be appointed and will be conducting applications for men interested in becoming Charter members of the new lodge.

Michael A. Volentin, PDD and member of the New Lodge Committee for the State of New York said, there is a great deal of interest in the New Lodge and invites your cooperation and support. Present members are asked to bring a friend or relative.

Economy.

Economy Plus.

Our Beetle has gained the reputation of being a truly economical car. Economical to buy. Economical to run.

And then our Rabbit came along. With all the economy of the Beetle plus.

The Rabbit gets 37 mpg on the highway, 24 in the city. (That's EPA estimate for manual transmission. Actual mileage may vary depending on driving habits, car's condition and optional equipment.) And because it has fuel-injection you can use the most economical grade of gas.

The Rabbit's also big on performance. It goes from 0 to 50 in just 7.7 seconds, has 4-wheel independent suspension, and when it comes to room, 87% of the interior is devoted to head, leg, and cargo room.

Adding one plus on top of another, you'll find nothing quite equals our Rabbit.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeanne Dixon

TUESDAY, JANUARY 25

Your birthday today: Serves mainly to upset comfortable habits you're falling into, stirs you up for a year-long scramble to get out of your current level of development into another. Projects undertaken now either last for short periods, bridging gaps to greater responsibility, or must be reorganized frequently. Be ready to move on short notice. Relationships are tenuous, not easy to confirm or intensify. Today's natives are unconventional, inventive, intrigued by new ideas.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: People merely mark time; hasty reactions won't help. Allow for delay in appointments, travel. Collect useless clutter, find profitable disposal for it.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Expect a combination of impatience and poor cooperation. Ignore irritations: save wear and tear on your nervous system, insure survival of future goodwill.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Everybody has a different theory about your money, how it should be spent. Look to see what they're doing or did lately with theirs, judge accordingly.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Errors, misunderstandings are the main crop of pilot projects, flirts. A long lane lacks a convenient turn. The problem is staying out of it to begin with.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]:

Affinity for cycles of nature dictates keeping to fundamentals. If tracking down details is dissatisfying, stop to think why. Abstain from criticism.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Youngsters come between people who should be in close harmony. Step out of the picture for a time. Let all find out what it means to get along without you.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Since today has no overriding force, you're tempted to supply it. Harsh words spoil an old relationship; be sure they're not yours or caused by your actions.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Unrealistic estimates upset judgment, make calculated risks too much so. Never mind other's urging. Whims stay with you long after you tire of them.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]:

19): Your organizational drive blows everyone's tolerance. Any theory with you at its center is abandoned. Temperament has a field day, many a scapegoat, not just you.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: You're better off if people cancel out while you still have freedom of movement. Take it lightly. They return on discovering what it's like elsewhere.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Use adequate but simple logic to defend your principles against distortive pressures. The more important your function, the tougher the resistance, dissent.

TEEN FORUM

BOUNCY: (Q.) I'm on the basketball team at our school. I'm very, very large-chested. I get a lot of remarks from the boys when I run down the court. They say things like, "You bounce as much as the ball" or "Are you up for grabs?"

This gets me very upset. If a boy asks me out, I'm not sure if he's asking me for just me or for my chest. I'm afraid to go out on dates because some boys think they can take advantage of me. I'm in desperate need of your help. — Eyeballed in Connecticut.

(A.) Do not belittle in your own mind what is truly one of your biggest advantages. Be proud of who you are and of what you've got.

All girls blessed (and that is the right word) with a big bustline get attention in one form or another. It is, as you have found, not all on the basketball court. But all girls, big or little, have to learn to watch out for trouble on dates. You handle that by policing yourself and by seeing that the boy polices himself.

To keep your breasts at their best in health and appearance, buy good bras that give you firm support and wear loose tops that don't cling to your outline.

FORGETTING: (Q.) I was going out with a girl named Linda for four months. Then she broke up with me for another guy, but I still love her very much and I can't get her out of my mind. What should I do? — Woolly Bear in Connecticut.

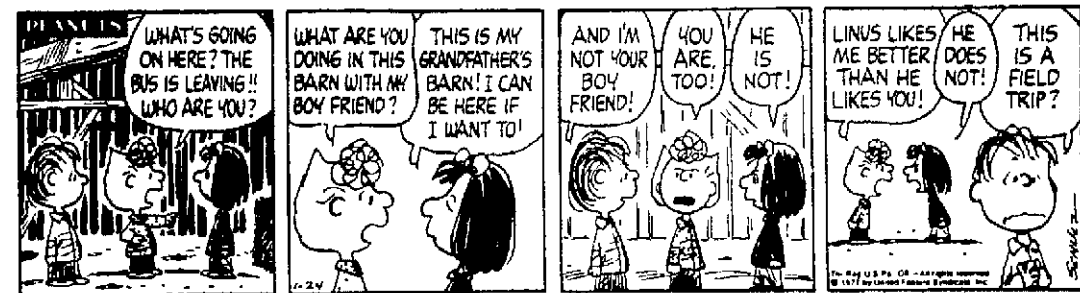

DEAR JEAN ADAMS: Please help Woolly Bear with his problem, because when he gets in the dumps, I get in the dumps. — Woolly Bear's Loving Sister in Connecticut.

(A.) It is good to hear that you and your sister are on the same wave length. Too many brothers and sisters aren't.

To help yourself get over Linda, concentrate on other things — old friends, new girls who are appealing to you, hobbies, jobs you've been putting off, studies at school.

It is not easy for a boy to forget an exciting girl. But he can do it, and he can learn to love someone else.

GUESSER FAILS BRIDGE TEST

by Alfred Sheinwold

"If you can guess right when all about you are guessing wrong and blaming it on you, Kliping or somebody once wrote, 'then you are a man' It's easy to see that Kliping was not a bridge player.

trump and keep your eyes open. East plays the nine of hearts on the second round of trumps, and you no longer have a guess: you know which red ace your partner has.

DAILY QUESTION
Dealer, at your right, bids one heart. You hold:
♠KQJ10985 ♠10 ♠A ♠AJ75
What do you say?

ANSWER: Double. You expect to jump to four spades at your next turn. The advantage of doubling first is that your partner may have the king-queen of clubs and an ace, in which case you have a chance of getting to a good slam contract.

A POCKET GUIDE TO BRIDGE written by Alfred Sheinwold is available. Get your copy by sending $1.35 (including postage & handling) to: Sheinwold On Bridge, (name of your newspaper), P.O. Box 854, Port Washington, N.Y. 11050.

Put yourself in the West seat for a test. Your job is to beat five spades. (No fair peeking at the East hand.) You open the singleton club. Declarer wins in dummy and leads a spade to the king.

You win with the ace of spades and think to yourself: "Now is the time to show what sort of bridge player I am. I must guess whether my partner has the ace of hearts or the ace of diamonds."

You have already shown what sort of bridge player you are, regardless of how you guess at the next lead. A bridge player doesn't guess when there is a way to be sure.

KEEP EYES OPEN
You should refuse the first trump trick. Take the second
